

Swigart Flower Garden Is Ordered Profusion of Blossoms And Greenery

(By Eva Nealon)

A little white gate under a great walnut tree, which spreads its shade out across a cobble stone walk and expanse of lawn, leads the way into the lovely flower garden of Mrs. Carl A. Swigart, 211 Genesee street, which composes her hobby, her work and her pleasure in life, while being at the same time the envy of her friends.

Hollyhocks at the fence, which marks the western border of the garden, nod saucy heads at visitors who enter at this season of the year. Brilliantly colored gladioli do not destroy the beauty of the delicate colored sprigs of blossom on the large butterfly bush which hovers over the eastern fence.

Mrs. Swigart, who was formerly president of the Medford Garden club, has added something new to the garden each year. It is now a combination of profusion of flowers and color segregated into little gardens which do not detract from a certain order, almost dignity, that pervades walks, arbors and boundaries of the grounds. The order is the outgrowth of constant care and planning and adds a refreshing air to the friendliness of the lounging chairs, scattered about in the shade of the walnut tree.

A brick walk leads from the cobbles down through the pergola, covered with grape vines, where green grapes hang in a sufficient number of clusters to prove they have not been planted for beauty alone.

The bricks of the walk are softened by a growth of wooly tyme. Beds on the north side of the pergola and sweet peas, which climb the posts, add a wealth of color to the view, glimpsed thru the lattice work of grape leaves.

Flowers and vines, however, do not dominate the garden. Mrs. Swigart has realized the importance of naturalness in planning and shrubs and trees are placed at frequent intervals. Several catalpas and almond trees grow on opposite sides of the pergola.

Flowers in varieties so numerous, Mrs. Swigart has never counted them—larkspur, petunias, violas, elium, delphiniums, roses, daisies and hosts of others fill beds and corners of the fence and trellis. Stalks of their predecessors, who bloom earlier in the season, have been cut away, to destroy all sense of dead past, which often invade gardens.

A seed bed, where the flowers get their start, is located just outside the trellis. As soon as the plants in the garden go to seed, Mrs. Swigart says, she knows it is time to place the seeds of that variety in the hot beds. In this way they start sprouting at the same time they would if the plant scattered them about the ground from its own seed pods.

She calls them all by their botanical names when visitors are not around. But refuses to be called a highbrow. She just happens to learn the botanical ones first.

Beggar Gives Check as Bail

Charged with begging at Hyde, Isle of Wight, recently, Thomas Terry, 25, promptly produced a check book and drew a check for $250 to cover his bail. He admitted paying $150 for an automobile and negotiating for the purchase of a $2,500 home. He was sentenced to three months' imprisonment.

Whale Leather Gloves Out

Women of Europe are again finding the whale an ally to their wardrobe. Whale "leather" is being used in making fashionable gloves, and style leaders have approved the new material composed of the intestines of the huge swimmers.

The new gloves are delicately soft, but so tough it is almost impossible to wear them out. The whale has not contributed to women's styles since the days of the whale-bone for corsets.

She Seeks Gentleman.

"I have never met a real gentleman in Glasgow," wrote a 24-year-old miss of the Scotch city in an appeal to the mayor of Dunedin, N. Z., for help in securing a husband. The mayor is broadcasting the message to New Zealand gentlemen.

Dancing Taught by Squares.

Dancing steps are being taught by means of a checkerboard floor-board, recently invented by a dancing master of Berlin, Germany. It fits the average size room. The squares are numbered and a code tells upon which square the pupil's feet should be for each step.

Deporting the Agitators

(San Francisco Chronicle)

One reason why bolshevik agitators can make such persistent pests of themselves in America appears in the statement of the immigration commissioner's dilemma over a group of undesirable Russians held here for deportation. From this it seems that such people are practically immune. Local authorities who pick up the undesirable generally turn them over to the immigration service and let it go at that. And the immigration service has no machinery for deportation to Russia.

Steamship companies will not accept passengers for deportation without some kind of credentials. If the authorities at the other end refuse to admit deportees and the United States declines to take them back the steamship companies are stuck with a motley crew of unwanted guests. And there being no diplomatic relations with Russia, the immigration officials cannot obtain the necessary credentials.

The result is the immigration commissioner is left with these undesirable on his hands. There are not enough of them to justify chartering a steamship, as was done a few years ago when a large number of Russian radicals were rounded up and sent to Russia. As the commissioner cannot board the undesirable indefinitely his only course is to release them on bond. Realizing their immunity the undesirable aliens go back to their old tricks, are picked up and again released through the same procedure.

A remedy for this would be prosecution by local authorities of such undesirable for minor as well as major offenses. This would curb their lawless activities and the records would be an additional ground for deportation when an avenue of deportation is opened or when there are enough on hand to justify chartering a steamship to carry them over and dump them on the shores of the country they profess to admire so greatly.

Nanking, China, proposes to reconstruct the city in a big way. Already 77 proposals of improvements have been adopted. Among them are the construction of a river port, installation of a waterworks system, opening of a metropolitan park and a Grand Metropolitan Museum, provision for free clinics, promotion of industry and the opening of factories, development of afforestation, and laying out of a beautiful residential district.

PURITAN MALT

IT'S DIFFERENT

Yes—the Controlled-Temperature Process is expensive—

Certainly it cost us considerable money to install the wonderful "Controlled-Temperature Process" in the Puritan plants.

But—this every second watchfulness of the manufacturing process results in every batch of Puritan being up to specifications and like every other batch.

One reason why Puritan Malt is "different" is because it is absolutely the same—perfectly uniform everywhere—all the time—most all other brands give you less quantity than Puritan—the Puritan can hold 10% more than most.
