Radio Claims Opera Singer of Medford, Is New York Story

NEW YORK (AP)—Caroline Andrews was born to the opera, but the modern art of radio has the real claim to her voice.

Since 1923, when she first appeared before a microphone with Roxy and His gang, the beautiful young coloratura soprano has contributed often to the entertainment of the nation's listeners.

Her background was the opera stage. Her mother and father were touring the country as stars of the Andrews Opera company when she was born near Minneapolis, Minn. But they decided that she should not be a professional musician, the company was disbanded, and the family went to Oregon.

Fate, however, decided otherwise and when Caroline had reached the age of 12, her aunt, also a singer, persuaded her parents that she should be permitted to study music.

Thus before radio broadcasting was little more than a dream, she started a career that led her to the microphone. Previous to her radio work, she was on the opera and musical comedy stage, including many important roles, and in vaudeville.

After numerous appearances with Roxy, who introduced her to her first radio audience as "the Lark", she joined the staff of the NBC chain, where she is heard in numerous programs of a classical or semi-classical nature.

Next to music, books are her love.

She has two volumes of Faust which she prizes highly, and has a library of many outstanding volumes.

Although she is unable to say how the listeners know that her hobby is books, listeners have sent her many fine works as presents, including a leather-bound dictionary and encyclopedia.

She admits that she misses the stage, but she will never leave the radio "because it means more to the people than the stage."

Remembered Here. The lovely voice of Caroline Andrews is known and remembered by many residents of this city, where she formerly made her home. Her father still lives in Medford and Caroline frequently visits him and her local friends.

Dinner Party at Inn. Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Heils, whose marriage was an event of last week, were honor guests at the dinner party given by members of the Medford library staff at Rogue Elk Inn Thursday evening. Mrs. Heils was formerly Miss Dorothea Schatz.

Mrs. Isaacs Is Portland Guest. Mrs. Edna Isaacs left Medford last night for Portland, where she will visit her sister, Mrs. Merritt Schoonover, and accompany her mother, Mrs. Rose Eifert, who has been visiting in Portland for several weeks, upon her return to this city.
