Book Review Daily
FIRE OF YOUTH
By Margaret Pedler

The author of Red Ashes and Yesterday's Harvest weaves another direct and strongly emotional romance in the drama of Phyllis Weatherly, who must choose between penniless young love and the attractions of wealth and certitude of middle age. At twenty with a difficult family and an English country home to manage on very little income—with a talented young sister who wanted to study singing—and a brother who would paint great pictures if he could only find means to study, Phyllis, the courageous one, must find a way. And the way was not Terry, the penniless young architect to whom her heart turned with all the impetuosity of a first love. Of Phyllis' love and her struggle to find happiness, Margaret Pedler makes a story powerful in its appeal. Price $1, or get it to read from our Rental Library for 5c a day.
