nothing would break. My appetite was poor. I couldn't eat anything hardly on account of indigestion, slept poorly and was almost continually constipated. Sargon got my rheumatism 'on the run,' my appetite is good, I sleep fine and am feeling stronger and better all the time. Sargon Pills keep me regulated in great shape and never give me a minute's trouble with nausea or griping."—Capt. Martin Madison, 811 West 41st St., near Bremerton, Wash. Magill Drug Co., Agents.

Daily Book Review

VERY GOOD, JEEVES By P. G. Wodehouse

Wodehouse fans, who know Bertram Wooster best, are aware that in his journey through life Bertie is impeded and generally snookered by about as neatly a collection of aunts as was ever assembled. Aunt Agatha left her dog, McIntosh, to be nursed in his flat in her absence; Aunt Dahlia commissioned him to disentangle her daughter's eulor from his amorous messes. Poor Bertie. Life would have been intolerable if it had not been for Jeeves, the perfect butler, the gentleman's perfect gentleman. He solves ten dilemmas in ten rousing strokes. Read this and hundreds of others from our Rental Library for 3c and 5c a day.

Oregon Inhabited by Ancient Race Is Evidence of Carvings

Ancient folk who inhabited America before the Indians left rock carvings of antelope (top) and lizards (reproduced left), says Dr. J. B. Horner (right) of Oregon State college. PORTLAND, Ore.—(AP)—Petroglyphic stone carvings along the Columbia river near Arlington, Ore., show that an ancient race inhabited the country before the Indians. "That is the conclusion drawn from the strange characters by Dr. J. B. Horner, director of historical research at Oregon State college. "When the white man came, no native knew the origin or meaning of these mysterious characters," Dr. Horner declares. "A few centuries ago along the Pacific coast left stranded those who later perished ashore or were amalgamated with the natives. "Possibly there were Phoenicians who may have traversed the Pacific long before it was recorded on the maps of geographers. "It is possible that the Pacific northwest was populated even before Europe and that in some early period the inhabitants along the Columbia river were living in their stone age. "This recalls that the Pacific northwest is very old." The petroglyphs, cut in solid rock, are so old they are covered with a coat of black ash carved. The stone in which they are carved. "It is known from the petroglyphs that the early natives along the Columbia practiced a dignified form of sun worship," Dr. Horner finds, "and at least three other forms—fire worship, image worship and the worship of Talapus, the maize wolf or coyote. "Some of the petroglyphs chart battle, some successful hunting parties, and others the visits of other tribes, though it is believed their meaning will some day be revealed as indicating considerable intelligence in those who carved fore Europe and that in some early Lockwood and his fellows, all civil war veterans, formed the club in 1885.
