TURTLE MYSTERY AT COLVIG DRUGS GRIPS POPULACE

The airminded people of Medford and the Rogue River valley are still much up in the air—completely mystified as to what Fred Colvig intends to do with the turtles he is advertising for in the Mail Tribune, offering four bits for each live turtle which measures at least five or six inches across the widest part of its back.

The turtles that have already been brought in are reposing in half-filled tubs in the back part of the Colvig drug store, and as still more are wanted kids from all over the county are seeking sizable turtles to fill the advertisement. One of the kids who have already delivered the goods was a girl.

What on earth can Fred be up to? No one but himself knows. If he wants them for soup he would ask for bigger ones. Maybe he is going to establish them on a Tom Thumb golf course.

One of the nicest turtles yet brought in, and over which the druggist was wont to wring his hands in Shylockian glee as in low Shakesperian like voice he muttered something, is missing. When the M. G. M. lion gave an extra loud roar in front of the Rialto theater yesterday afternoon, this turtle bolted out of his tub and out the back door with a gurgling-like noise sounding like "Here Dwells Youth, nit," and has not been seen since. It may turn up unexpectedly among the stock in Royal Lee's gents goods emporium next door. Tom Ginn of the Rialto theater is looking for it also in that amusement house, as he is fond of fifty cent pieces.

In fact, Messrs. Lee and Ginn had about rigged up a scheme to purloin the Colvig turtles and sell them back again to Fred one by one, through some kid fellow conspirator.

Mr. Colvig has nothing to say about what he wants the turtles for, except to state that when enough of them have been brought in, he will notify the public.

Lon Chaney Stars in Craterian Film

Lon Chaney, the man of many voices, is just as effective as Lon Chaney, the man of many faces. This he proves in the dialogue of "The Unholy Three," which opens at the Fox Craterian theater tomorrow.

Lon Chaney.

Lon Chaney held off for a long time from the babbling cinema, but his fears of the public's favor now seem greatly exaggerated. Chaney's early training as a ventriloquist stands him in good stead. He supplies vocal accomplishments for a parrot and an old lady with equal facility and in all speaks at five different pitches.

Any who saw the silent version of "The Unholy Three" will admit that the story is the ideal stuff for celluloid purposes. A talking version is even stronger than a silent because it gives still further material with which to heighten the illusion.

COPCO PROGRAM ON AIR TONIGHT

An entertaining radio program is in store for those who tune in on station KMED during "Copco Hour" 9 to 10 p.m. tonight, featuring four popular young "co-eds" of the University of Oregon in music, mirth and song, assisted by Frona Bray, local dramatic reader and song writer. Mrs. Bray has written a clever sketch for the occasion which is entitled "Aunt Dinah's Wedding."

A group of new "Pep Songs," writen by the director of musical education in the Pasadena city schools, will be introduced.

Included in the cast will be Cecile Coss, soprano; Virginia Baker, contralto and "blues" artist; Geraldine Thompson, violin; Alice Holmbach, piano accompanist and Frona Belle Bray, reader.

As a special feature, Mrs. Bray's new song hit, "My Girl Has It," will be presented during the program by the quartette followed by a tap dance given by Zo Dell Lantis, accompanied by Helen Edmiston.

GOLF TOURNEY TO DRAW BIG ENTRY

Invitations to participate in the annual southern Oregon amateur golf championship tournament at the Medford club course have been forwarded to nine clubs, and favorable answers have been received that large delegations will be sent to Medford. The tournament will be played August 29, 30, 31, and September 1.

The tournament committee wouldd appreciate expression of intentions by local members to take part. Entry cards can be obtained from the club professional, Joe Mozelle, at the course. At least 75 entries are expected among local club members.

Clubs invited to take part include Roseburg, Marshfield, Bend, Grants Pass, Ashland, Klamath Falls, Weed, McCloud and Eureka.

LUSCIOUS BERRIES READY FOR PICKER

Berry time is here. Huckleberries from Huckleberry mountain were brought into Medford yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. Henry Mankin who picked 25 gallons during the four days they were in the patch. They describe this year's crop as fair.

A bumper crop of blackberries in the Applegate region is reported by visitors in that section. The berries will be ripe about the middle of this month and Gus Newbury says there are six tons on his former ranch, now owned by Fred Straub. Each summer crowds of people from all over the valley flock to the Applegate region for these evergreen berries during the "jelly season" and an equally large invasion is anticipated this year.

LABOR COUNCIL TO MAKE PLANS FOR OCTOBER CONFAB

Tomorrow evening the delegates and members of the Medford Central Labor Council will meet in the labor temple above the Medford Pharmacy to enjoy a talk by Ben T. Osborne of Portland, secretary of the State Federation of Labor. Mr. Osborne's visit to Medford is primarily for the purpose of perfecting plans for the labor convention slated for Medford on October 5, 6, 7 and 8.

Because of the importance of Mr. Osborne's visit here and the business matters which will come before the meeting tomorrow evening, a large turnout of delegates and union men is urged by Ray Tucker, head of the Medford Central Labor council. The October labor conclave in this city promises to be one of the most successful in the history of organized labor in this state and members of the local council and enthusiastically working to make this event a signal success.

OUTDOOR FRANKLIN NOTED ROAD SCOUT IN MEDFORD MONDAY

C. L. (Outdoor) Franklin, of Los Angeles, who started some weeks ago on a 6000-mile scouting expedition by auto, from San Jose del Cabo, the lowest point in California, to the farthest point north he could reach by auto, was in Medford Monday for a few hours, en route home.

Outdoor Franklin is the road scout for the Richfield Oil Co. and while here visited Searls Spencer, manager of the local branch. He also visited Crater and Diamond lakes Sunday and the air circus dedicating Medford's air port Monday and extended greetings over the radio at the port.

Franklin has been scouting for 21 years, and has covered over a million and a quarter miles, visiting the places of interest to sportsmen and tourists, taking pictures and writing stories of his trips.

His car is equipped with everything, including radio, refrigerator and complete camp outfit, to make the trip a pleasant one. It is said his equipment cost more than the Buick car he was driving. The power for his radio is generated from the engine of his car.

On the trip north Franklin went up the Roosevelt highway to Vancouver, B. C., and 862 miles north of Vancouver to Hazelton, B. C., the latter part of the trip being over the Caribou trail. He went as far as a car can be forced to go. This trail, when completed in two years will connect with the Alaskan railroad.

He is returning over the Pacific highway, visiting all the points of interest and will be back in Los Angeles the last of the week.

Franklin said Crater and Diamond lakes are among the greatest scenic spots he had ever visited and said Medford people should be proud of their wonderful airport.

The heavy auto traffic and big crowds yesterday at the Medford airport dedication ceremonies were handled with little difficulty with the assistance of 53 members of the two Medford Oregon National Guard units. Medford traffic officers were also on duty, but the task was done by the guardsmen under direction of Captain Carl Y. Tengwald. The crowds on the grounds were also kept in check by the guardsmen.

LEGION BREAKS EVEN ON AIR TOUR EXPENSE

Expenses of the coming of the Pacific Northwest Air Tour to Medford yesterday were expected to be realized by reason of the gate receipts, reports today indicated. Over $1200 was necessary to finance the air tour's visit to Medford and a little over $1300 was received in receipts. It had been the impression of quite a number of people that the air tour was financing its own trip to Medford, but inquiry revealed a different situation.

"Lawful Larceny" at Rialto Tomorrow

In "Lawful Larceny," Radio's all talking adaptation of the Samuel Shipman play, which comes to the Fox Rialto theatre tomorrow, Hollywood's newest bride, Bebe Daniels, is starred as the wife who combats the theft of her husband by an avaricious siren.

Bebe Daniels

"Lawful Larceny," a conspicuous success among Broadway offerings of its stage, has to do particular vis-a-vis with life among the rich and leisured, where matrimonial croppers seem numerous out of all proportions. To Miss Daniels as the girl whose husband goes bounding gaily up the primrose path, it affords just one more chance to prove the versatility of her talents.

Wm. Penn's can be found at most all the cigar stands. A campaign for this cigar starts in today's Mail Tribune, exclusive for this territory.
