Prefers Southern Oregon

Two years ago Mr. and Mrs. Gene Rowland left Astoria, N. M., for Oregon and Washington, in search of a new location. They saw nothing in California that struck their fancy and saw no possibility of a choice until they reached southern Oregon. They wanted to establish a service station and lunch stand and a spot north of Medford, on the outskirts of Central Point, interested them. Following an inspection of the property, they took a tour of the entire state, saw nothing better and located on their first choice, and now they are full-fledged southern Oregon residents. So reported Mr. Rowland when he was in Medford today attending to business matters.

To Take Down Signs
The "no parking" signs that had been posted last week on some county roads near the Medford airport to prevent parking of cars during the airport dedication ceremonies and arrival of the Pacific Northwest air tour last Monday, are to be taken down in a few days. When they were first erected, some motorists thought they were to be maintained indefinitely and had been nailed on telephone poles to prevent parking of cars after dark by joy riders, who at times find more joy in looking at the moon than riding.

THE HOME OF BREAD LIKE MOTHER MADE

What Are Commercial Bakery Substitutes!

For nearly ten years we have been telling you that our bread is baked without the use of commercial substitutes, to make this plainer we shall endeavor to tell you what they are.

Every housewife knows how to bake good bread but there has always been a marked difference between bread of her baking and that bought from a commercial bakery—a difference in color, texture, flavor—so pronounced as to make it seem like a different product.

There are two causes for this—method of handling—and what goes into the bread and it's the things you don't put in when you bake that we call substitutes. These consist of corn sugar, die malt, and a chemical leaving agent—the basis of which is alum.

Science is divided as to whether some of these are harmful—some say no—some say yes—Australia and New Zealand forbid their use by law.

Maybe they are harmless—but until we are sure—we are not going to use them—and any way home-made bread is the best.
