

LOCAL BARTLETT GROWERS FEEL MUCH BETTER

Stronger Market in East Boosts Local Cannery Prices — Extra Fancies Bring $40—Start to Buy Cull Pears in Valley.

A healthful and rosy tone was reflected today in Bartlett pear prices—both cannery and eastern shipments.

Several large deals for the purchase of large blocks of cannery Bartletts have been closed the past three or four days, and several more are pending.

Growers and shippers also report that cannery representatives have shown a disposition toicker for cannery pears, asking growers to offer a proposition.

Today's and yesterday's price for Bartletts in New York markets showed an increase of from 25 to 35 cents per box over the same days last week.

The first Rogue river Bartletts are due to arrive in New York the end of the week, and will go on sale, probably on the next Monday afternoon.

All the packing plants of the Medford district were working full blast today, and another train will be dispatched east tonight.

VALLEY PEOPLE BEHOLD AUGUST SHOOTING STARS

The annual August shower of shooting stars, known to people with astronomical minds and educations as Perseids, was viewed last night by residents of southern Oregon, who were fortunate enough to be out from under their roofs when the heavenly fireworks began about 10 o'clock, continuing on toward midnight.

No definite count on the number of meteors that sped through the skies like rockets was given out by the local weather bureau. The reports of local citizens varied from 20 to 100. One hundred an hour is a common average, according to the report of Howard W. Blakeslee, Associated Press science editor.

The Perseids come from the northeast any time between August 5 and 15. They are said to ignite at probably about 70 miles elevation, from friction, and that they burn up by the time they drop to about 55 miles. They may be as fast as meteoric dust so light that it floats with air currents.

Thrilling Tennis Game Enjoyed at Newhall Home In honor of the Misses Jean Ingles and Marian Weir of Cleveland, Ohio, who have been week ending at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Carter of this city, a tennis tournament, followed by a dinner, was held at the home of Mrs. Charles S. Newhall Sunday afternoon.

Tournament play began early in the afternoon, with 18 young people paired and seeded for mixed doubles. After a series of well played, hard fought matches, the roster of players was gradually diminished, with Miss Marian Weir and Mr. Corning Kenly, Miss Peggy Hamill and Granger Hill qualifying for the finals. The deciding set of the afternoon proved a test of nerves between Miss Weir and Mr. Hill, while Miss Hamill and Mr. Kenly thrilled the gallery with spectacular base-line drives. With a final burst of aces the Hamill-Hill combination forged ahead to win the set and the tournament, 6-4. Success of the various matches was largely due to Paul Schöber, who served as a competent judge throughout the afternoon, and who afterwards took the court himself to defeat Mr. Harold Jordan, 6-4, in an exhibition singles match.

The number of spectators and players included the following: Mr. and Mrs. Paul Schöber, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Jordan, the Misses Frances and Harriett Sparrow, Ellen Hill, Peggy Hamill, Roxane Ruhl, Marian Weir, Jean Ingles and Mary Pearson; the Messrs. William S. Newhall, Granger Hill, Farwell, Corning Kenly, Stuart Clark, Perovrine White, Bayard Getchell, John Ferry and Durbar Carpenter.

Joan Crawford in Modern Talking Hit What is reported to be Joan Crawford's most pretentious talking picture to date will be seen at the Fox Criterion theatre tomorrow when Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer presents "Our Blushing Brides," an extremely modern drama with

Amia Page and Dorothy Montgomery in the cast. The story concerns the respective romances of three girls who work in the same department store and who share living quarters. Fed up with the humdrum and depressing existence of alarm clocks and canned food, two of the roommates throw all caution to the winds, and when two wealthy and impetuous admirers offer them the opportunity for a more luxurious life, they accept, one with the sanction of a wedding ring, and the other with an extremely modern drama with
