

Mid-West Outranks Nation in A. P. All-American Selections

FAR WEST AND EAST EACH WIN TWO POSITIONS

Three Notre Dame Men On First Team—Pinckert and Edwards Represent Pacific Coast.

By Alan Gould (Associated Press Sports Editor) NEW YORK—(AP)—The Great Middle West, by a clean cut and decisive margin, has won the "Battle of All-American Ballots" for 1930.

Although sharing the inter-sectional football honors of the season with the Far West and South, the Mid-Western forces led by Notre Dame were backed by a veritable deluge of votes in the far-flung skirmish for the highest individual honors of the great American college sport.

To help settle the All-American argument, the Associated Press this year conducted the most comprehensive poll of expert newspaper opinion yet attempted. A total of 214 sports editors and writers, scanning the gridiron activities in all sectors of the country contributed their selections after studying all the available information.

Poll Each Section

Each section had its proportionate vote in the proceedings so that there was no chance to "pick" the ball box.

The consensus of this sixth annual popular poll showed the mid-west capturing six of the 11 places on the first All-American team, thereby giving the midland area a clear majority of places for the first time since Caspar Whitney and Walter Camp were the arbiters of all-star gridiron selections.

The far west and east each gain two of the most coveted places and the south one.

On the All-American squad as a whole, comprising the 33 players listed in these separate line-ups, the sectional distribution shows that 11 for the mid-west, nine for the far west, eight for the east, four for the Old South and one for the south-west.

Notre Dame Leads

The national attention focused throughout the season on the exploits of the Rough Riders of Notre Dame resulted in the selection of three stars of this team for a first All-American honors and a total of five for places on the squad.

Carideo, Schwartz and Metzger are on the first team, Savoldi and Conley on the second. No other team has been accorded such outstanding recognition in the Associated Press consensus since 1925, when Dartmouth's national champions placed three men on the first 11.

Carideo received a total of 388 votes out of a possible 426. The selections were tabulated on a basis of two votes for first team choice, one vote for a nomination for the second team. Carideo received first-team consideration in 184 of the 213 ballots cast. He was the second choice of 29 other selectors.

Close Rivals

Fesler, Ohio State's captain and all-around ace, and Fred Sington, 215-pound star of Alabama's mighty line, were the other outstanding choices in the nationwide balloting. They led all rivals by big margins in their respective positions, end and tackle. Fesler polled 306 votes and Sington, 250.

Washington State's Southern California, mightiest array in the far west, contributed most of the talent from that sector. Each placed one star on the first team. The Trojans won four positions on the squad altogether, only one less than Notre Dame, while the champion Cougars gained three places.

Colgate Places

For the east, in addition to Harvard's continuation of Tacklet at center for the second straight year Colgate placed its first man on the big team in 11 years.

The Maroon fullback, Len Macaluso, first team choice over Joe Savoldi of Notre Dame as a result of a strong finish, is the first Colgate All-American since Belford West achieved the honor for the second time on Walter Camp's 1919 array.

With the exception of Carideo's runaway race for the quarterback role and with it the mythical expatriate of the mythical team, the balloting was close and exciting for the backfield positions. Erny Pinckert, Southern California's great running and blocking back, led the halfbacks by a fairly decisive margin. He polled 145 votes for a lead of 29 over his nearest competitor, Macaluso, who carried Notre Dame's great climax runner.

St. Stennett Favored

Fred "Stu" Stennett of St. Mary's gained the 10th halfback position on the squad, his total of 73 votes beating out such rivals as Kitzmiller of Oregon with 65, Louis Weller of Haskell with 55, Marty Miller of Notre Dame with 41, Orville Mohler of Southern California with 39, Turfy Edman of Washington State with 34, C. Leland of Texas Christian with 22, Frank Christensen of Utah with 20.

With Rod and Gun

By Ernest Rostel and Dick Green

Back in 1879, James (Jim) Watkins, old-time southern Oregon resident, killed his first bear in Jackson county, he recalled yesterday in recounting some of his early experiences in this section. George Beale proposed to show Jim how to go bear hunting and a trip on horseback, accompanied by two dogs, took them to Cherry Glades, four miles northeast of Rancheria.

There they set the dogs on, and in a few minutes heard them bark. The hunters soon came in sight of a bear, high up in a fir tree. The animal saw the hunters and departed its high perch, heading into a canyon, with the dogs close behind.

Beale said to Jim, "There is a cub still up the tree. You stay here and if it comes down, shoot it."

"I didn't want to stay," Jim recalled yesterday, "but I wouldn't tell Beale. I had an old shotgun and it was loaded for bear with a handful of black powder and buckshot in each barrel. I had a thousand thoughts to stay or get on my horse and let the bear go.

In a few moments I heard him coming down. He came down backwards, looking around in every direction. He would drop down four or five feet and then catch himself, holding onto the tree a second and drop again. I could see him plainly and I thought it was the old bear and began to think Beale was after the cub. I cocked both barrels and expected to fire and have the old bear lying in case the first did not kill.

Instead of nothing one trigger, I got excited and pulled both when the bear was about 15 feet up the tree. I thought I saw the animal fall, but I fell at the same time, kicked down by the gun. My nose and mouth were bleeding and I thought my collar bone was broken.

"When I came to, I sat up and saw the bear lying there with his head shot off. He was ten feet up front of me and the gun was ten feet behind. I heard Beale shoot and the dogs set barking. After awhile he came to me and found me sitting up with my mouth and nose still bleeding. I had most of my shirt off, looking at my shoulder. He asked me if I had been in a bear fight. I told him I hadn't but that I was hurt just the same. After an examination revealed that my collar bone was not broken, he broke into hilarious laughter. Then and there I vowed I would never shoot the gun again."

However, Jim learned to shoot and later took part in a hunt that brought to earth the last grizzly bear in the Mt. Pitt section.

with California game representatives. It was agreed the federal law, regulating the bag limit for ducks and geese, should be enforced. The law allows each hunter four acres per day but restricts him to the possession of not more than eight at one time. It was also agreed that hunters might take their game into their home state by hunters of either state, in view of the fact that many Oregon hunters buy California licenses and California hunters buy Oregon licenses.

PATTON TO FORE AS BOWLING ACE OF CITY LEAGUE

Owney Patton forged to the top of the City Bowling league individual standings last week, proving that the eye and hand which made him a baseball star of years ago by still retain their cunning. Pratt and Ends placed, followed by Noyd, while Al Hagen and son Billy staged a family row for fifth rung in the ladder, young Hagen taking the honor by bettering his dad's average two pins.

Eugene Tealos defeated the local phone squad Friday three straight in their telegraphic match. Gates Auto and Elks lodge tangle tonight on the Nat. totals in a city league set.

EUGENE, Dec. 8.—(AP)—The Oregon basketball team made its initial bow for the season Saturday night by defeating the home-town unbeaten Multnomah club of Portland, 45 to 22. The Oregon combination, led by veterans at every position, broke the club's defense at the opening of the game and never let the lead be threatened. WORLD BROADCAST FOR SERVICE GAME PLANNED

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—(AP)—A round-the-world broadcast of the Army-Navy football game will be undertaken Saturday by the navy.

A running account of the game in high frequency code will be sent out to naval communications stations transmitted to the far Pacific by the naval radio station at San Francisco.

KRUSE WILL HAVE TOUGH TIME WITH OMAHA WRESTLER

Charlie Struck, the Omaha man who defeated Stanislaus Zyzko, former world's heavyweight champion, and other well known champions is expected to give Bob Kruse the battle of his life at the arena next Wednesday night in a tough match. Struck appeared to good advantage here a few weeks ago when he met John Eberhart, barefoot Seattle wrestler. Struck is adept and can also be rough, a trait for which Kruse has been so well known. Kruse has been a consistent winner in Medford, but may suffer another setback when he comes up against the eastern man who has been on the coast for the past several weeks.

The special event will present Medford's potential champion, Ray Fribble, clawing wildcat, against Gabby Brooks, Seattle, in what is expected to be a close match. Brooks is known for his rough tactics and it will be up to Fribble to be just as rough.
