Odd Fellows and Rebekahs In Yule Festivity Tuesday Election of Officers Held

The approaching holiday season has brought about a resumption of activities in the four branches of the lodge, and many social evenings are planned for the remainder of the winter. The first on the list beginning next week will be a Christmas tree and entertainment, to be a feature of Tuesday evening, December 23. A committee from Medford Lodge No. 83 has been named to act with a committee from Olive Rebekah Lodge No. 28 to handle the affair, and a program will be put on for the kiddies and grownups alike.

The lodge has adopted this as an annual custom, and this event is looked forward to by the membership as one of the best evenings of the year. Santa Claus will be there in all his trimmings and the little folks will receive a visit from him about 8:30 that evening.

Olive Rebekah Lodge No. 28 held the annual "home coming" gathering Monday evening, and visitors from the surrounding towns were present, along with the local members for the evening. Following the business meeting the annual roll call was held.

Officers for the lodge for the coming term have been elected as follows: Kate Laidley, noble grand; Lillie Clark, vice grand; Maud Stieckel, financial secretary; Mary Wiley, recording secretary; Carrie Rickert, treasurer. The new officers will be installed early in January.

Medford Lodge No. 83 has been active the past few months, and visits have been made by the degree team and other members to ISTANBUL, Turkey, Dec. 19.—(AP)—From Diarbekir in the remote eastern provinces comes a story of the amazement of peasants at automobiles. An old woman in a curious throng looking at a car of touring officials asked if it had any children; she'd like one. The chauffeur tried to explain when along came an accompanying motorcycle. The motorists left behind them a reputation for stinginess and lying.
