CAUGHT KNAPPING? Not a chance. For who is going to pass up a Christmas Eve such as lovely Evalyn Knapp, above, is inviting by posing under a self-supporting sprig of holly. Step right up, boys!

IS THERE A SANTA CLAUS? WELL, HERE'S THE PROOF. If you've been real good, and expect a visit from Santa, the first thing to do is to take a peek up the chimney to see that the way is clear, as the little fellow at the left is doing. This fact ascertained, hang up your stocking (or, as the next picture indicates, someone else's). And when you awake in the morning, lo and behold, there is the stocking crammed with gifts. The reason everything came off as predicted was that Santa, instead of coming by reindeer sled, chose a fast automobile!

THEY RAMBLER OVER THE U. S. A., THEN THE U. S. C., did the Notre Dame warriors, to score their 19th straight football victory in two years. These photos were taken in the game at Los Angeles, where the Fighting Irish defeated University of Southern California 27 to 0. Above, Carideo, of Notre Dame, is shown kicking the goal after the first touch-down, and below is a stunt scene between the halves.

IT WAS "CELL-OUT" FOR THESE NEWSIES and a good "break" for these fair co-eds of the University of Southern California when journalism students took to convict garb in a promotion scheme to sell copies of their annual publication, "The Razzberry." They sold 2000 copies, a big success.

YOU'D RECOGNIZE these men by their voices, if not by their faces, for they are stars of the Chicago Civic Opera Company. Rene Maison, above, and Alexander Kipnis, in the lower photos, are shown as they appear in various roles.

THEY REALLY HAVE SUCH CHARMING WEIGHTS—In one of the riskiest of experiments, these well-proportioned chorus girls fed for 16 weeks on sweets and other foods reputed to be fat producers, just to see if they could change their weights. Well, here they are, lined up after the experiment waiting to be weighed. And what do you suppose? They didn't put on an ounce. They are all members of the Fanchon and Marco dancers.

IT WILL MAKE PRESIDENT HOOVER plenty envious, perhaps, to know that one of his cabinet members, Arthur M. Hyde, secretary of agriculture, made this splendid catch in the Gulf Stream, off Miami, Fla., recently. The collection includes kingfish, red bass, barracuda and dolphin. Secretary Hyde is shown at the right.

MARCHING AS TO WAR—Here are members of opposing English teams, the Collegers and Oppidans, marching arm in arm to the playing field to engage in the "Wall game," a contest staged annually at Eton as part of the St. Andrew's Day celebration.
