WILD BEAUTY

by MATEEL HOWE FARNHAM

SYNOPSIS: The cruelty of her mother-in-law impels Fanny Frost to run away from her husband, David, with another man. When she repents and returns before any scandal has been done, the elder Mrs. Frost refuses to believe her innocent and forces her to leave again, abducting, almost, the four David custody of their child, Sheila. In New York, Garrett Westcourt, married to an invalid wife, falls in love with Fanny but does not press his affections upon her. Fanny comes to see Sheila secretly, and then Sheila runs away to visit her mother. Amelia, David's sister, living in London, almost her suspected Fanny was treated unjustly. A message from Fanny, the Frost cook, confirms the suspicion, and she decides to investigate.

Chapter 36

A CHAMPION AT LAST

AMELIA sailed next day for America without cabling her mother. The night before she landed she radioed her, "Arriving Cloughbarre Wednesday. Telegraph Fanny's address Plaza. Important. Love. Amelia."

At first Mrs. Frost was in a panic. What was back of this precipitous arrival? Why did Amelia want to see Fanny before coming home? But Amelia was impulsive. Doubtless nothing more sinister prompted this visit than a sudden unconquered bout of homesickness.

The only talk Amelia had with her mother about Fanny was when she brought it out as interesting gossip that she, Amelia, had been finding out what a terrible swell Fanny was.

"Yes, Mother darling, Fanny. Her father got married the other day. It was announced in the London papers and I had Clark look him up. The family is pretty well smashed by the war, but Fanny's great-grandfather was king of a South German principality. An opéra bouffe kingdom if you will, but still a king among kings. They go back to Charlemagne, and can call nine-tenths the Almanac de Gotha cousin."

One evening a few days later Amelia hurried to follow David into his study where he always went after dinner to smoke.

"Are you in on the family conspiracy?" asked Amelia.

"What conspiracy?"

"Mother seems to think that the Brownbeck heaven will fall if I catch you alone. I crossed the ocean to have a talk with you."

"Rot," said David. He added grimly, "There is one topic I never discuss. Anything else—fire away."

"Why won't you talk about Fanny? There's a great deal that needs to be said—should have been said six or seven years ago."

"I prefer not to hear it. What's more I won't."

"Because you're afraid?"

David shrugged his shoulders.

"That explanation is as good as any," he answered coldly.

"Poor Davey! Does it still hurt so much? But aren't you a little morbid? If you once talked it out . . ."

"If you want to talk to me," said David evenly, "you'll have to respect my—let us call them prejudices."

"I can't talk freely with Mother about to pop in any moment," went on Amelia. "There's so much I must say to you. There are things you must know. Sheila is growing up. She has run away twice. And I warn you solemnly——"

The door opened and Mrs. Frost hurried in, glancing suspiciously from her son to her daughter.

"Leona has made a fire in the library," she said quickly. "It's cold in here."

"It will be warmer in a minute," Amelia answered. "David and I are just settling down to a few brotherly and sisterly compliments. For your own sake, Mother, I'd like a few more minutes with David alone."

"Don't go," David commanded his mother.

"I have no such intention." Mrs. Frost seated herself majestically in a straight, high-backed chair.

"This is my private study," began David, getting to his feet. "You came in uninvited . . ."

Amelia swung round on them.

"Why didn't you have the decency to answer Fanny's last letter?—the one she wrote you a year or so ago?"

David sat down.

"I never received a letter."

Amelia had won the first round.

"I guessed as much. It was sent to this house. I myself sent half a dozen letters here to be forwarded to Fanny. Fanny never got them—or others Juliette wrote. It seems unlikely all those letters were lost."

Mrs. Frost was in mortal terror only by the greatest good luck—David's obstinate determination not to discuss his wife, and Edward Philbrick's unspoken connivance—had Mrs. Frost been able to keep from her son that Fanny had never gone to Europe with Robert Daniels. It was common family knowledge. But only David's mother and his lawyer knew that David had never been told. David was speaking.

"Do you know about this?" he asked his mother. His tone was sharp.

"Yes." Mrs. Frost did not flinch. "The letter addressed to you I took to your Cousin Edward. There was nothing in the letter but an impudent demand for Sheila. Your cousin answered it kindly, but firmly, in the way you would have answered it yourself. Perhaps our judgment was at fault. But it was just after you had had the influenza. You had instructed Edward to act for you. We agreed it would be best to spare you."

Amelia gave a little gasp. That letter was one of her trump cards. Could her mother get away with that? Apparently she could.

"I'm sure your intentions were the best, but you should have brought the letter to me—let me decide," said David evenly.

"I'm sorry, David. I worried for a long time whether I had done right. . . ."

"How about my letters and Juliette's?" Amelia broke in. "It's a pretty serious offense, intercepting the United States mail. Fanny hadn't instructed you to act for her. I don't see how Fanny's private mail had anything to do with David's feelings."

"Those letters came years ago, soon after Fanny had left. It was a time of great mental and moral stress. My highest duty was to Sheila. Sheila had to be protected."

"Sheila protected from Fanny! Name of a name! Unless Fanny were a mere ——. No court of law—you know the law only separates abandoned women absolutely from their children. You've out-Heroded the law!"

David was shaken; his hand trembled.

"If you can prove to me that . . . that"—he could not speak Fanny's name—"if you can prove that any injustice has been done——"

"Arrant nonsense," Mrs. Frost cried. "After her flagrant desertion——"

Amelia swung round and faced her mother.

"Do you suppose Fanny hasn't a story to tell? You're as vindictive as you are stupid. Sheila doesn't know yet that Fanny lived for two years on $15 a week, clerking behind a counter; that all she had for her food was 35 cents a day——" Amelia choked. "Do you think Sheila will ever forgive you that?"

"But that can't be true. It isn't true," David cried.

"It is true. Come down to New York with me. I'll prove it. Oh, I know you offered Fanny money. But you know she refused it. You ought to be proud, if it's in you to be proud, that your child's mother threw your money in your face, after you had cast her out without a hearing. Didn't you know that she'd die first? But no. You were her husband for six years, and such a thought never entered your head! You never even bothered to find out whether she was dead or alive."

Although Mrs. Frost feared one revelation more than all else, she could not keep her head clear through a tempest like this; she opened the door on her doom.

"David took it for granted that Fanny was provided for—that that man provided for her."

"What man?" Amelia asked quickly, and then, "Bob Daniels? David, you couldn't think she would take Bob Daniels's money! You couldn't have thought that?"

"But why not?" he cried wildly. She went to Europe with him."

"Fanny never went to Europe with Bob. You don't mean you don't know? Fanny went straight from this house to her old nurse."

David grasped Amelia's wrist.

"Can you prove that? How do you know?"

"Know? Why, everyone knows. Leona, Cousin Emmeline, Mother!" Amelia stopped, caught at her throat. "Mother, you, you——"

Mrs. Frost bit her lip until it lost all feeling. David turned upon her.

"You knew—you let me believe that hideous lie?"

Mrs. Frost caught at a chair to steady herself.

"What I did was for your sake, David—yours and Sheila's," she whimpered. Tears were running unchecked down her livid cheeks.

Her two children, all she had in life, shrank away from her, horror in their eyes.

David and Fanny meet again in Monday's chapter. Can the old love return—or is it too late?

ORDINANCE NO. 2648.

An Ordinance declaring the assessment of the property benefited for the cost of Grading and Graveling West Palm Street from North Oakdale Avenue to North Peach Street; and directing the recorder to enter a statement thereof in the Docket of City Liens, and to publish a notice thereof as required by the Charter.

THE CITY OF MEDFORD DOTH ORDAIN AS FOLLOWS:

ORDINANCE NO. 2650.

An Ordinance declaring the assessment of the property benefited for the cost of grading and graveling Myers Court from West 4th Street to West Main Street; and directing the Recorder to enter a statement thereof in the Docket of City Liens, and to publish a notice thereof as required by the Charter.

THE CITY OF MEDFORD DOTH ORDAIN AS FOLLOWS:

Section 1. Whereas the City Council did heretofore by Resolution declare its intention to grade and gravel Myers Court from West 4th Street to West Main Street; and to assess upon each lot or part thereof adjacent to and benefited by such improvement, its proportionate share of the cost of said improvement, and did fix the time and place for hearing protests against the grading and graveling on said street and the assessment of the cost thereof as aforesaid. And

Whereas, said Resolution was duly posted and published as required by Section 79 of the Charter of said City. And

Whereas, a meeting of the Council was held at the time and place fixed in said Resolution for the purpose of considering any such protests, but no protests were made at such time, or at any time made to or received by the Council to the grading and graveling of Myers Court from West 4th Street to West Main Street, or the assessing of the cost thereof, as aforesaid, and said Council has considered the matter and deeming that said grading and graveling was and is of material benefit to said City and that all the property to be assessed therefor will be benefited thereby to the extent of the probable amount of the respective assessments to be levied against said property, did order the grading and graveling done. And

Whereas, the cost of said grading and graveling has been and hereby is determined to be the sum of $1703.56.

Now, Therefore, it is hereby further determined that the proportionate share of the cost of grading and graveling of each parcel of property adjacent to and benefited by said improvement, is the amount set opposite the description of each piece or parcel of land below and that each piece or parcel of land is benefited by the grading and graveling to the full extent of the amount so set opposite such piece or parcel and that the respective amounts represent the proportional benefits of said grading and graveling to said respective parcels of property, and the Council does hereby declare each of the parcels of property described below, and each of the same is hereby assessed the amount set opposite each respective description for the cost of grading and graveling.

ORDINANCE NO. 2651.

An Ordinance declaring the assessment of the property benefited for the cost of grading and graveling West Holly Street from Summitt Avenue to Columbus Avenue; and directing the recorder to enter a statement thereof in the Docket of City Liens, and to publish a notice thereof as required by the Charter.

THE CITY OF MEDFORD DOTH ORDAIN AS FOLLOWS:

Section 1. Whereas the City Council did heretofore by Resolution declare its intention to grade and gravel West Holly Street from Summitt Avenue to Columbus Avenue; and to assess upon each lot or part thereof adjacent to and benefited by such improvement, its proportionate share of the cost of said improvement, and did fix the time and place for hearing protests against the grading and graveling on said street and the assessment of the cost thereof as aforesaid. And

Whereas, said Resolution was duly posted and published as required by Section 79 of the Charter of said City. And

Whereas, a meeting of the Council was held at the time and place fixed in said Resolution for the purpose of considering any such protests, but no protests were made at such time, or at any time made to or received by the Council to the grading and graveling of West Holly Street from Summitt Avenue to Columbus Avenue, or the assessing of the cost thereof, as aforesaid, and said grading and graveling was and is of material benefit to said City and that all the property to be assessed therefor will be benefited thereby to the extent of the probable amount of the respective assessments to be levied against said property, did order the grading and graveling done. And

Whereas, the cost of said grading and graveling has been and hereby is determined to be the sum of $2322.93.

Now, Therefore, it is hereby further determined that the proportionate share of the cost of grading and graveling of each parcel of property adjacent to and benefited by said improvement, is the amount set opposite the description of each piece or parcel of land below and that each piece or parcel of land is benefited by the grading and graveling to the full extent of the amount so set opposite such piece or parcel and that the respective amounts represent the proportional benefits of said grading and graveling to said respective parcels of property, and the Council does hereby declare each of the parcels of property described below, and each of the same is hereby assessed the amount set opposite each respective description for the cost of grading and graveling.
