

FRAME OF MIND KEY TO VICTORY IN GRID BATTLE

Dixie Star Says Psychology Often Goes Amiss—Don't Be Too Smart, Is Advice to Players.

By Dillon Graham.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 21.—(AP)—Tobey Dadd, for two years Dixie's outstanding quarterback, says mental stance paves the way for football victories.

"All this talk about smartness and psychology is good stuff, but it's the old frame of mind and poise that counts most," he says.

For three seasons Dadd has been the general manager of Tennessee's great football teams and almost unanimous choice for all-Southern quarterback in 1929 and 1930.

"Psychology will beat you in the long run," he continued. "You can win with it sometimes, but in a tight place some other guy is going to 'out-psychologize' you. It doesn't pay to be too smart. You're riding for a fall when you get that way."

Cool Performer.

"The boy whose heart pumps ice-water." That's the way one writer pictured Dadd, one of the coolest performers under fire in Dixie.

Bobby doesn't believe in following set rules in mapping out his attack, explaining, "I try to start out just like a boxer feeling out his opponent. I fight around with several plays, keeping close note on how certain plays go or fail to go. Then, when I'm in a scoring spot I've got a pretty good idea which one of our pet touchdown plays will work."

Dadd doesn't side with those exponents of quarterback play who suggest watching the faces of the opponents to find their reaction to plays and to decide on the next play.

"That may work sometimes, but if your opponents aren't mighty dumb they can cross you up. You've got to figure what they're expecting and give them something different."

Study Situations.

"Advice to quarterbacks — and you know I'm going to start teaching them at Georgia Tech next fall — is to study possible situations revolving around your plays ahead of time and then have several solutions available for use when the time comes. Don't wait for the circumstances and then try to depend on your quick thinking to get you out of trouble." Dadd believes psychology is of greatest use in studying the men on one's own team.

Bobby's greatest thrill came in the Kentucky game of 1929.

"We'd been playing on a snow-covered field and hadn't gained a yard through Kentucky's line all afternoon. They had us 6 to 0, with only three minutes left, and we had the ball near the center of the field.

"I was having terrible luck with my passes, Kentucky intercepting two of the three I had thrown.

"We came back for the huddle and Buddy Hackman—a great pass receiver and one of the finest players I know when under pressure—said 'Throw me a pass and I'll eat my shirt if I don't catch it.'

"Well, it worked."

More opposition is expressed against the proposed poison campaign, this time voiced by Ted R. Ford, who recalls a similar campaign in his native state of South Dakota where results were far from satisfactory. Like R. H. Sims, rancher, who expressed his opinion in this column last week, Ford declares the campaign would do more harm than good.

"I say that it is regrettable that this sportsman's paradise must face this spectre of destruction," says a letter from Ford, "but it must be squarely met or southern Oregon will eventually lose one of its major attractions. My knowledge of such campaigns carried on in western South Dakota prompts me to say they are never justified by results. Of course, some predatory animals are killed, but who will say that native prairie chickens, once so plentiful in the Dakotas did not suffer more? It naturally follows that all other wild life must suffer."

"Here, as there," continues the letter, "it seems the sheep and cattle men were the indicators of the campaign, but I am sure that these same interests, properly enlightened, would about-face in their views as they did in Dakota. Though, I am sorry to say, this did not take place until after much damage had resulted. I am unable to give accurate figures regarding the results of the Dakota poison campaign, but such data may be had on request from any good sporting magazine or sportsman's organization.

"It is hard to believe," he writes, "that the sportsmen of Oregon will allow such procedure to occur. I sincerely hope preventive steps will soon be taken to protect the wild life of the woods from being innocent victims of poison meant for coyotes and wolves. Far from favoring such campaign, I am in favor of the enactment of laws prohibiting trappers and others from using poison except in such rare instances as might justify their use. Down with the poison pill slinger. I might add that I am 100 per cent in favor of closing the Rogue river to nets."

A party of local fishermen, on a steelhead trip last Monday to the Illinois River, returned empty handed, although the day before several local fishermen returned with their limit. Sunday the fish were biting in great shape, but the following day local anglers possibly arrived too late in the day, coming at a time that the best fish would not enter the fish from the safety of the stream. In the Rogue river, there has been little success reported, probably due to general inactivity of fishermen at this time. The water depth is reported below normal, but is expected to be better before the end of the month, when the steelhead season will be closed until April 15.

Records at the county clerk's office reveal that Harry C. Rykman, Dodson was the first.

MINORS BOW MAJOR LEAGUE DRAFT DEMAND

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Baseball's battle over the universal draft is ended and the spoils of war belong to the major leagues. The minor leagues' defenses, slowly crumbling for several weeks, collapsed yesterday when the last class AA stronghold, the International league, voted to accept the majors' demands.

The International league, where some of the most violent anti-draft sentiment was manifested, was forced to yield to a superior force. A majority of the league's club owners decided that the battle was too unequal and what had threatened to develop into a bitter and costly baseball war had resolved into nothing more than a harmless duel won by the majors without bloodshed.

FRISBIE WRESTLES ANTIPODES CHAMP WEDNESDAY NIGHT

Another big test for Ray Frisbie is coming his way when the local heavyweight wrestler meets Bonnie Muir, Australian heavyweight champ, at the armory next Wednesday night. Frisbie made his main event debut a week ago when he defeated Jack Romano in a finish match, taking two out of three falls, after one of the cleanest wrestling struggles ever seen in Medford.

The special event will present an old southern Oregon favorite, Cecil Barrick, Medford, against Jack Brantano of O'Brien, Ore., for 45 minutes or best two out of three falls. Barrick is down in good training form and plans to show local fans he is as good as he ever was. HEALTH OFFICER

New York City.

Dear Sirs:

As a public health officer, I cannot help but recognize the fact that your campaign to eliminate the evils resulting from promiscuous spitting and the spit-tipping method of cigar making is commendable and in line with the health work done by my own department.

I see that you call it a "Crusade of Decency". Certainly insanitary methods in cigar making are indecent. An advertising campaign like yours, which exposes such indecency and points the way to the cleansing of your industry, deserves the support of my department.

While I express no preference for your cigar over any other, I am pleased to inform you that I do endorse your campaign to show the public the advantages of avoiding insanitary practices. You are free to publish that fact or, if you wish, to publish this letter over my signature.

Very truly yours,
Carl T. Pomeroy
