Masked Longing

SYNOPSIS: Aileen Gray who is a star with a new Broadway show with the help of Jimmy Crane, theatrical press agent who lives with her. Jimmy's sister, Vivienne, an artist's model, is jealous of this sudden rise to fame. At a party given for Aileen by Delight Channing, artist, Vivienne seeks to draw attention to herself by making a date to dance in the limelight. Aileen, trying to prevent this, is discharged when she falls through a glass door. Vivienne is forced with the task of supporting her mother's expenses. Jimmy is concerned for Aileen. Jimmy persuades Aileen to consent to have her voice tested for making phonograph records. In a sneaking way Jimmy is doing with Aileen. Vivienne, a most suggestive of sinister intentions.

Chapter 16 GRIM NEWS

JIMMY GUessed the truth—that Krouber had met Vivienne while she was posing at Channing's studio. The producer, he knew, was a fast worker when a pretty girl caught his fancy.

Seeing Vivienne there riled him. Aileen would be waiting for her at home; no doubt getting dinner ready. Yet the chances were that Krouber would suggest their ordering here.

Somebody ought to warn the fool to keep away from him. Not that it mattered to Jimmy what Vivienne chose to do—except on Aileen's account. Just the same he felt that he ought to break this thing up somehow, to hit on some way of making Vivienne realize that a bit in a Krouber show is always dearly bought.

One of these days Krouber would make front page in a whole of a juicy sex-up. It might be as well to suggest to Viv that she need not figure in it.

Then Crane had an inspiration. Vivienne had not seen him. Twenty minutes later, he was sitting before the fire in Channing's studio. Channing listened quietly to Jimmy's story. His code forbade his mentioning the scene that had passed between Vivienne and himself. He had been certain that Vivienne would get in touch with Krouber.

Her motive was perfectly plain, and unless he was much mistaken, there was something more than pique in her having phoned to the producer. She was far too sophisticated not to be thoroughly aware of what she was about.

Channing strongly suspected that her underlying purpose was to make him jealous, though he discounted her sincerity in proposing what she had to him.

She would never have gone through with it if his answer had been different. She had known what his reaction would be.

The trouble was that it peaked her that his only interest in her charms had been an artist's viewpoint.

Outwardly, at least, Viv was the type that could not exist without being told she was lovely. By deliberately holding himself aloof he had offended her.

The real secret was that Vivienne needed a man who would care for her as Crane cared for Aileen. With all her deep intensity—as yet only partly stirred—her soul cried for the caresses of a man who would be strong enough to shake her affection.

Perhaps he had been rather brutal in his treatment of Vivienne. Yet his analysis of her character suggested that it was better to let her work out her own salvation. Just now she was the victim of a flood of conflicting desires—not a little desperate at the responsibility that had fallen on her shoulders—through her own thoughtlessness.

"Don't worry," he said to Jimmy. "If Viv's the girl I think she is, Krouber's wasting time if she found a man she really loved, she'd go the limit for him. But there won't be any affinity between Vivienne and Krouber. He's clever and has a thin veneer which goes very well with the sort of girls who are looking for exactly what he has to offer. Viv will resent him the moment the man reveals himself. And he doesn't waste much time. So I rather think this experience will be a good thing for her. She'll have a hard position, and she'll have to find herself."

"But Aileen will eat her heart out—while the experiment's going on!"

"No she won't," Channing said. "The very thing that Vivienne imagines she may do will spur Aileen to effort. It will show her the necessity of making herself independent. That's going to help a lot. If you stir up Vivienne, you'll only add fuel to the fire."

"Krouber dead? Who killed him, and why? Read tomorrow's chapter."

Flying fins! Glittering, flashing silver scales! Struggles of huge salmon bucking the currents of Alaskan waters!

All this will be seen—not from the surface of the water, but as startling submarine views in "The Silver Horde." Radio Pictures' epic drama from the great Rex Beach novel, opening today at the Holly theatre.

Scenes of the mad rush of salmon to spawning grounds were photographed below the surface of the rivers. Special camera cases were constructed. Unique devices applied to fish traps regulated the depth at which the salmon swam.

The most unusual underwater photographic effects ever filmed were said to be the result.

Camera cases were waterproofed. Placed in position at low tide, motors were started turning when the tide came in. Due to the great variance in tide levels in Alaskan waters, it was possible to photograph the fish in depths varying from one to ten feet.

Evelyn Brent, Louis Wolheim, Joel McCrea, Raymond Hatton, Jean Arthur, Gavin Gordon and Blanche Sweet are featured in "The Silver Horde."

He murmured: "Oh, Pardon Me" ... a hundred times a day ...

A HUNDRED times a day he suffered the agonies of embarrassment as his conversation was interrupted by "Pardon Me's," as he turned away to stifle gas. It had been that way for years. No matter what he ate, it caused gas and discomfort. His stomach constantly caused him pain. He could hardly bear the idea of food. He was irritable and nervous—couldn't sleep. A friend suggested Tanlac. He tried it. In a few days the gaseous condition left him. His appetite returned. He began to feel loads better in every way. He slept like a boy.

Stomach gas is not only painful as well as embarrassing but it may be the warning of dangerous stomach troubles. Get rid of it—straighten out the condition that causes it with Tanlac. Few preparations have Tanlac's wonderful record of success in quickly relieving gas discomfort and stomach distress. It has helped thousands and it will help you, too, or your druggist will return your money.
