

PAROLE CHIEF PAYS VISIT TO KINFOLK HERE

Judge Wood, Brother of Mrs. Valo, On Coast Inspecting Federal Prisons — Likes Climate.

Judge Arthur D. Wood, chairman of the United States board of paroles, department of justice, Washington, D. C., was a visitor in Medford the first of the week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Louis H. Valo, of 714 Heckman avenue, enroute to San Francisco, to confer with the California state parole board and visit state prisons.

Judge Wood and Dr. A. Stannard, both of the board, left Washington, January 18, on their first official visit to the western federal prisons. Judge Wood later coming to Medford for a visit with his sister, Mrs. Louis H. Valo, and Mr. Valo.

The federal board of paroles is a comparatively new venture on the part of the United States government. It came into being only last June, when President Hoover appointed Judge Wood to his present post. The first in the Ohio state prison last Easter, when more than 300 prisoners died of burns, decided the action.

70 Per Cent Good

Only 30 per cent of the men and women in state prison are different from those outside, with the exception of their one criminal act, Judge Wood says, the other 70 per cent are just average human beings, with much of good in their make-up, and usually they are sorry for their crime. A plan has been devised for permitting the more responsible prisoners to work in road camps, at federal farms, where they enjoy the health-giving outdoor air and exercise, while doing valuable work in building roads, planting trees, making cement sidewalks and similar improvements.

Another part of the general plan is to build adult farms, where the chronic alcoholics and drug addicts may be confined away from other prisoners. Four such farms are now being established in the nation.

Two Causes

Two great factors contributing to crime are national questions, the judge stated. One is unreasonable labor, resulting in depression like the present. When a man's job is gone and his family is in need, he will steal to provide for them and no law can stop him. The problem of the underprivileged child is another which must be met. Formation of boys' clubs, as being tried by the state of New York, was the solution offered.

"The Boy Scout movement is a wonderful aid, but does not reach far enough. If the states would do some supporting of the movement, by furnishing the boys who cannot afford scout equipment with these necessities, that would be ideal," Judge Wood said.

This was his first trip to the western states, and he found the mild coast climate a revelation. "After enjoying a few weeks of this weather, I can readily understand why my brother-in-law, Louis Valo, says he'll never live in any other state than Oregon," Judge Wood declared.

PUBLIC HEARINGS TAKE SOLON TIME

SALEM, Feb. 11.—(AP)—Representative John Manning today protested against time of committees being taken up listening to opinions and arguments over bills before the legislature, and refused to attend any more public hearings, unless they are confined to considering objections and amendments.

His protest came during a hearing on the grants power bill before the house military committee. His statements broke up the session, and the committee agreed to leave the Grange bill, which is a senate measure until it passes the upper body.

shoot" into the heart of the Medford business district. It will leave Riverside avenue for truck and tourist travel and relieve congestion at Main and Riverside avenues. It will also coincide with the state highway commission plan to straighten the Pacific highway between this city and Central Point.

Long Contemplated
The project, hanging fire for a couple of years, was started about the time that the south end of Central avenue was connected with the Pacific highway.

The county court also heard a delegation of farmers living south of Ashland, tell their road troubles, and a farmer who locks a gate across a road—the only outlet of a neighbor. The matter was ordered referred to the district attorney for action.

This afternoon the county court will consider more plans for the county courthouse and consult with Frank C. Clark, local architect.

SAVANTS TO DIG AMID RUINS OF XERXES PALACE

Glories of Ancient Persia Will Be Revealed Through Work of University of Chicago.

CHICAGO, Feb. 11.—(AP)—The glories of ancient Persia, immortalized in history by the Emperor Darius and his son, Xerxes, are to be revealed in a scientific light by a party of archaeologists from the University of Chicago.

After years of negotiations with the Persian government, the Oriental institute of the university has removed all objections to excavations on the site of Persepolis, where Darius built a magnificent capital five centuries before Christ.

The Persian expedition is the first archaeological endeavor under the new antiquities law of that country. It will be the eleventh party of excavators sent into the Near East by the university. The other 10 are in Egypt, Palestine, the Hittite country of Asia Minor and Iraq.

Work This Summer
James H. Breasted, director of the Oriental institute, is commander-in-chief of the expeditions. The Persepolis archaeologists will be at work this summer. The site of the city, marked by walls and columns rising above the plain, is inland from the Persian gulf, near Shiraz.

The institute this summer also will begin excavations of four ancient Babylonian cities near Baghdad, along the old caravan route between Babylon and Persia. This expedition will be directed from the new archaeological headquarters at Tell Asmar.

Persepolis, built by Darius in the fifth century before Christ, was noted chiefly for its "Palace of the King of Kings," built by Xerxes. Xerxes was murdered in one of his palaces in 465 B. C. and in 331 B. C. Alexander the Great burned Persepolis in retaliation for Xerxes' destruction of Athens a century before.

In Greek Defense
Xerxes is linked with the epochal Greek defense at the Thermopylae pass where Leonidas and 300 Spartans died holding back the Persians. It was on that expedition that Xerxes burned Athens.

The Oriental institute hopes to remove the debris of centuries from the palaces, which time has not entirely buried. But more important, said Dr. Breasted, will be the unearthing of sculptures and other works of art. Archaeologists have found many specimens of ancient Persian art, but none from the time past that Darius and Xerxes glorified.

Professor Breasted believes the "cradle of civilization" will be found in Asia Minor in a circle of seven-mile diameter, bounded by the eastern end of the Mediterranean sea, the northern end of the Persian gulf and the Taurus and the Caucasus mountains.
