WHEN THEY LAUGH the world laughs, too. Easy to tell at a mile's distance is the big smile of Jack Oakie, above, film comedian. More familiar to Europeans is the grin of Mme Olga Moussine-Pouchkine, below, veteran Russian actress, who is preparing for an American debut.

TO FOLKS WHO HAVE TO BUTTON UP THEIR OVERCOAT some like this are most tantalizing. While most people are pushing a snow shovel, the fair damsels at the left push a ball in a perspiring contest at the Deauville Beach club, Santa Monica, Calif. Miss Ruby Harrington, center, demonstrates for us an innovation at Long Beach, Calif.—balloon diving. And across the country, at Palm Beach, Fla., we find Henrie Manush, infielder on the Washington baseball team, playing leap frog with his wife!

THEY WENT TO THE HEAD OF THEIR CLASS. did these handsome dogs, at the Birmingham National Dog Show recently held in England. Witley Punch, above, a clumber spaniel, won four first prizes while Reba Romance, below, won top honors in the terrier class. And don't they look like proud champs?

AN IDEA OF HOW THEY FALL FOR WINTER SPORTS at Ottawa, sports capital of Canada, may be had from the above picture. These girls were practising for the annual winter carnival when they got their skis mixed up.

HAMLET and such things of Shakespeare used to keep pretty Harriet Lee, above, busy on the stage. But now, as a contralto, she is a soloist over the radio.

ANYBODY LOOKING FOR AN ARGUMENT?—These future admirals at the U. S. Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md., are, as you see, already being taught to sail into the foe. Sons of naval officers stationed at the academy, these youngsters are receiving boxing instruction from Spike Webb, veteran instructor. They look rough, tough and ready, don't they?

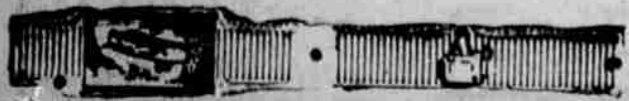

SOME ON. PULLED A BIG BONE when this portion of the skeleton of a mastodon was unearthed recently near Cromwell, Ind. The above photo shows a group of children looking at the tusk and skull of the big creature at the Buffalo (N. Y.) Museum of Science. The tusk is 12 feet long, and with the plaster covering weighs half a ton.

SNOW QUEEN of Northern Michigan's 1931 winter sports was the title recently bestowed upon cute Naomi Hooker, above, of Petokey, Mich. She is 18 and an expert on skis and skates.

CAN'T YOU SEE THOSE ARMS AND LEGS FLY and hear the scraping of steel against ice as these skaters get off to a start in the five mile race at the annual skating tournament at Oconomowoc, Wis.? Frank Stack, of Chicago, won the national amateur outdoor skating championship at the tournament.
