MISS AMES GAINS PLACE IN VOLUME WESTERN POETRY

"Northwest Verse," an anthology edited by H. G. Merriam, recently released by the Caxton Printers, is being greeted with much enthusiasm by literary-minded Oregonians this week, and will be found especially interesting by residents of Medford, for it includes works of several young authors well known here, and of one Medford poet—Lucile Perry Ames.

Two poems by Miss Ames were among those selected from the works of more than 100 poets of Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana, for publication. They are "Old Lady Wobblecane" and "Nocturne."

Nearly 200 writers were asked by the editor to submit to him the six or seven of their poems which they considered best. Other writers voluntarily submitted their verse. The editor checked his author selection with his own selection. The result is in a sense, according to the editor, a doubly selected collection of verse.

EXIT by Harold Bell Wright

SYNOPSIS: If, as Tony Latour believes, his childhood sweetheart watches from the wings, she sees his love for her surviving her marriage to Roy Donovan and her final exit from life's stage. In Pierre, her son, Tony, formerly an actor, sees her theatrical talent reborn. The turning leaves of memory disclose Tony and Harriet's childhood and the budding of their affection. The girl's talent in amateur dramatics had drawn growing praise from the town's citizens, reared to regard the stage as wicked and its devotees evil-minded. But this conviction—shared by his parents, who spied her as a barrier to Tony's intended career and a minister, did not dim Tony's hopes of marriage to Harriet, although he had not yet proposed to her.

DRAMA OFF-STAGE
Toward the end of their last year at the Academy, Antonio began to think seriously of the future. He had not fully committed himself to the ministry, but it was tacitly accepted by his parents and the community that he was to enter a Theological Seminary following his graduation from the Academy. The young man realized that the time for definite decisions was at hand.

Harriet kissed Tony before everybody. slowly banks and the willow thicket. The memories of their first boy and girl meeting and of the many hours they had spent there together—the season, warm and rich with the fragrance of the earth and growing things—do you wonder that the young man was stupid about the play which he and the girl were rehearsing and that she had often to chide him for not getting into his part?

His thoughts were all upon the roles that Harriet and he were to act in a play of much greater importance than the one in which they would appear on the Dramatic Club stage before all Orchard Hill. Tony wanted to make the love passages real. But the girl was too intent upon the drama and he dared not risk speaking of his very real love when she was so occupied with the art of making their stage love seem real. So the boy took what comfort he could in their mimic love scenes and waited a more opportune time.

That play was a great success. Harriet, in her love scenes with Tony, must have felt the genuineness of his passion. Certainly she electrified the audience like a creature inspired. Even those who were most emphatic in their disapproval of the professional stage and of Harriet, crowded about her, when the final curtain was down, with congratulations. The girl in the excitement of her triumph threw her arms about Tony's neck and kissed him before everybody. It was an unheard-of thing, for an Orchard Hill girl to do—and Orchard Hill did not forget it.

Presently she came along the path from her home on the hill. Tony held his breath and stood very still. While waiting for her lover, not realizing that he was so near, Harriet gathered violets, exactly as on that other occasion, which now seemed to Tony but an hour ago. At last the young man stepped forth. The girl stood, smiling, as if she had known all the time how near he was.

FOREST SMOKING RULES IN FORCE FOR DRY SEASON

Beginning today several restrictions affecting the use of national forest land become effective.

Smoking is governed by the following regulation: "Except on paved or surfaced highways smoking on lands of the United States within the national forests of Oregon and Washington is prohibited while traveling timber, brush or grass areas, from July 1 until the close of the fire season as declared by the regional forest, but not later than September 30."

There is also a state law which prohibits the throwing away of burning matches, or tobacco from moving vehicles, and this law applies to all lands regardless of whether or not they are within the national forests.

The discharging of any kind of fire works is prohibited in the national forests by federal regulation. The only exception to this is on an open body of water where a fire could not be started.

Certain areas, beginning today, are closed to all travel, because of the excessive fire hazard. On the Crater National forest, these areas are as follows: The Ashland creek watershed, comprising 12,985 acres of land on the watershed from which the city of Ashland secures its municipal water supply, and the so-called "Blowdown" area, comprising approximately 60,000 acres on the middle and south fork of Rogue River. These areas are posted at all possible entrances, so that the public may be warned that they are not allowed to enter. While the general regulation only prohibits smoking while traveling, smoking in certain areas is entirely prohibited. This applies to the tracts from which timber is being logged under forest service regulations.

Other fire regulations in effect at all times on national forest land prohibit the following: Building a camp fire in leaves, rotten wood, or other places where it is likely to spread, or against large or hollow logs or stumps, where it is difficult to extinguish it completely.

Building a camp fire in a dangerous place, or during windy weather, without confining it to holes or cleared spaces from which all vegetable matter has been removed.

Leaving a camp fire without completely extinguishing it.

Customers at Mann's Department store Thursday and Friday will be greeted by sales girls in fashionable pajamas, displaying gay print models appropriate for beach and house wear.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC ADVERTISING LAKE AND SCENIC SPOTS

Booklets numbering 15,000, which carry beautiful illustrations of Crater Lake, the Oregon Caves, and other scenes of the southern Oregon out-of-doors, are being distributed by the Southern Pacific lines this week.

The colored cover of the booklet carries a picture of the lake and the friendly bears which inhabit the park. Phantom Ship, Wizard Island, the Lady of the Woods, Garden of the Gods and Mill Creek falls are among the other large illustrations included with descriptive stories, written in such a way as to make anyone who reads them want to visit the Crater Lake national park.

Another large two-page photograph shows the lake from the location of the lodge. A complete page is devoted to an illustration and description of the Oregon Caves.

BUILDING PERMITS HEAVY FIRST HALF

Although the building permit total for the month of June this year is below that of June, 1930, the total for the first six months of 1931 surpasses that of last year. Figures at the city building department show. The permits for the two new school buildings be-sued during February and March aided totals for the recent period. In 1930, the total reached $162,924 and 1931, $231,991. The school permits were for $40,000 and $100,000.

MISS RUMELS NEW COUNTY WORKERS GET PAY FOR 4TH

Miss Blanche Rumels of Santa Maria, Cal., today assumed duties as public health nurse for Jackson county, and will carry out the regular work, assisting Dr. B. C. Wilson, county doctor. Having received her nurse's training at St. Luke's hospital in San Francisco, and her public health training at the University of Oregon school in Portland, Miss Rumels claims to be a "dyed-in-the-wool" Oregonian. She completed her training in Portland at the close of the spring term.

The chief business before the county court this morning was the signing of the payroll, as the county employees could have funds for the Fourth of July celebration, and the approval of a large watch of bills. Several appeals from the needy for county aid were also considered. Several pleas were made for small sums, to tide working women over until the fruit season starts. One woman asked for a loan of $5. She said unless she could get it, her landlord would evict her.
