to their prison clothes, as they went to the chair. Fathers and mothers of the three executed stood outside of prison weeping, hammering on the prison gates, pleading for the lives of the men, Nicholas Leonelli, 33; Ferdinand Mangianello, 24; Fred Carmosino, 19, who went to death.

It was only one incident in our crime wave, and is mentioned only to warn young criminals that the death chair is a reality, and in the long run crime does not pay.

Small blessings are thankfully received in Wall Street. News from Paris, although nobody knew just what it was, made speculators and investors lift up their hearts, and stock prices: "Big Steel" drifted down below $4 recently, hopped up and closed at 105.

The London stock market was cheerful. The moratorium means that London stops paying us, for a year at least. France, also stops paying us if she joins in the moratorium.

In fact, everybody stops paying us, and we don't stop paying anybody. The ignorant man would say: "If this is a bull tip, so is the measles."

More anti-religious rioting in Spain.

In the town of Corunna a mob again attacked religious orders, following a meeting, in which it had been resolved to prevent the return to Corunna of priests and nuns driven out in earlier outbreaks. The monastery of San Jose de La Montana was fire. It was unoccupied, by firemen. Six of the were shot, one probably radical syndicalist, dashed to a pitch of excitement at a meeting in a bull ring.
