Ma's 'What-a-Man' Been Source Of Anxiety For 20 Years Says Mother

SEATTLE, July 18.—(AP)—The Rev. Guy E. Hudson may have been "What-a-Man" for three weeks to his bride, Mrs. Minnie "Ma" Kennedy, mother of Los Angeles' Almee Sempie McPherson, but to his family he has been a "constant source of anxiety" for 20 years, said the bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Eddie Hudson of Spokane, here today.

"Guy has been more trouble than the rest of my family combined," said Mrs. Hudson, who was here visiting relatives. "My other three boys are settled and industrious. They have helped Guy repeatedly and I have helped him. There is nothing more that we can do.

"If we got him out of this trouble, it would be only a short time until he needed help again. He is 27. He is old enough to settle down and behave himself."

Mrs. Hudson said that while two of Rev. Guy's brothers were in the army during the world war, "What-a-Man" was traveling about the country in spectacular style. She said she helped him with a "$25,000 nest egg I had put aside for my old age until it had dwindled to nothing."

NAUTILUS TOOK HEAVY BEATING FROM ATLANTIC

Crew Seasick and Without Fresh Water—Men Mass of Bruises From High Waves Tossing Vessel

LANCASTER, Pa., July 18.—(AP)—Oliver C. Riggs, former assistant engineer of Sir Hubert Wilkins' submarine "Nautilus," said today the undersea boat's crew "took an awful beating from the Atlantic" on the way to Great Britain, the first leg of the proposed journey to the North Pole.

Riggs, who resigned when the Nautilus reached Ireland, said the ocean crossing was the most terrible voyage he had ever made. At one time, he said, all but four members of the crew were helpless with seasickness.

Men Banged About. "Three days and three nights of the trip were terrible," Riggs said. "The engines were not working properly, the fresh water tanks were turned over, and we suffered agony from seasickness. We took an awful beating from the Atlantic and all of us were massed of bruises when we landed."

He said that because of the severity of fresh water the men could neither wash nor shave during the voyage.

BUTTER OFFERINGS QUICKLY TAKEN AS PRICE BOOST NEAR

PORTLAND, July 18.—(AP)—Continued strength is reflected in the market for butter as well as butterfat. Offerings of butter are being snapped up eagerly at full prices with occasional small premium for extreme quality. While no change in the price list was reported for the weekend session of the Produce Exchange, fractional advances are noted in the open market, which in reality reflects the actual condition of the trade here.

Butterfat price situation is today the most erratic of the season and not only reflects general betterment in the butter demand but likewise indicates a shortage of offerings. The tight control of the supply of fat continues with both city and country interests in combat.

With receipts still decreasing, demand for eggs continues, other strong in fact there is really a shortage of quality goods in most of the leading markets.

Demand for heavy weight hens is still increasing while the supply remains inadequate to take care of the call.

Market for country killed meats showed little, if any material change for the closing day of the week.

Market for apricots continues to strengthen with a growing call at primary points of the Pacific northwest and with an advancing price tendency.

Much poor quality California peaches are showing up in general demand for that fruit. Local early varieties are selling well on account of sheer quality.

Livestock. PORTLAND, Ore., July 18.—(AP)—CATTLE 10, calves 5. For week approximately 2789. General trade conditions were somewhat demoralized in the steer division with losses 50c to $1 more during the week. Bulls and calves were steady. Grass steers scaled around $7.75 for the better sorts with others generally $4@6.50 and some lower. Best grass heifers were around $6.50. One load of feed heifers sold at $7.25. Top grassers in the cow alley sold at $5.25 with bulk of desirable sheaves at $4.25@5. Calves and vealers generally sold at $4@8.50.

HOGS—250. For week approximately 2950. The market started steady to 10c higher for killer stuff with feeders appearing steady. Light butchers were around $8.75@8.85 for topers with one load at an extreme $9. Drive-in stuff appeared steady to firm with a general top of $8.75. Strong weight and heavy sorts sold at $8.50@8.50 with the bulk scaling $7 and better. Packing sows, scaled $5.50@6, with a few slaughter pigs $7.50@8.75, while feeders moved around $8@9.

SHEEP—400. For the week approximately 8370. Trade started steady to strong and 25c higher. Desirable Willamette valley lambs sold $5@5.75 and mostly $5.50 and better. Strictly choice Mt. Adams and higher quality was quoted to $8 and higher. Medium to choice yearlings sold at $3@4.25 with one selected lot moving at $4.35.

Wall Street Report

NEW YORK, July 18.—(AP)—Stock trading was almost completely neglected today, as foreign markets were closed, and Wall Street was disinclined to pass judgment on the prospects of a cure for the central European crisis resulting from the international conference of cabinet ministers.

Total transfers, as computed for the 2-hour session, were 367,179 shares, the smallest since May 18, 1928, with the single exception of Saturday, August 2, last, when 368,000 shares were traded. On May 8, 1928, the turnover was 189,500.

Stock prices, nevertheless, closed with a good tone. Today's closing prices for 17 selected stocks follow:

ANNUAL COCHRAN PICNIC TOMORROW

Tomorrow will be another red letter day in the life of John H. Cochran, well known veteran Medford citizen, because on that day the third annual picnic in his honor will be given by the former pupils of Wilbur Academy and their families, in Hutton grove, in the Garden valley of Douglas county.

Nearly 20 years ago Mr. Cochran was principal of the academy, and later was principal at Oakland, that county, and the respect and friendships accumulated during that period as evidenced by the Medford Insurance man to many former pupils that the result is this annual picnic outing in his honor. A basket lunch will be served at noon.

Mr. and Mrs. Cochran left several days ago to visit friends in that section and be on hand for Sunday's affair.
