Chapter 31 THIEF VERSUS THIEF

BRUCE paused for a moment before replying to Donovan's question as to the mystery sur-rounding his flight from home.

Then he began: "I had to go to Camden that night to deliver some papers from our bank to Mr. Fuller, the president of the Camden bank. Pierre was ready to go to New York to school but at the last minute I persuaded him to let me have his school money to invest in this wonderful mine you had been writing me about."

"All right, go on."

"Well, I'd made up my mind that if I could get that money from Pierre I would cut loose from Orchard Hill and come out here and join you. So when Pierre turned his money over to me, just a few minutes before I left to catch my train to Camden, I saw my chance. I left a letter for Ann, telling her that I was through for good.

"Ann's father had to go down to the bank that evening, and we walked as far as the bank together. At the side door of the bank we said goodby. Martin went into the bank. I started on toward the depot. I had only gone a little way when I suddenly remembered that I had nearly $200 in the bank and wished I had it. You see, Pierre's money was not nearly as much as you said we would need

"I looked at my watch and saw I had plenty of time, so I hustled back. As I was unlocking the door I saw something shining on the sidewalk. I picked it up and it was a Masonic watch charm. Of course I knew it was Martin's and I didn't even put in in my pocke, thinking that in another minute I would hand it to the old man.

with?" 'Twenty-five thousand."

"Got it on you?"
"Of course. You see, I already had the money I got from Pierre. I paid my expenses out of that."

"Hum-m," said Donovan, and lapsed into deep thought.

Bruce Carey's mental and pervous condition was pitiable. In his recital be had lived again, as it vere, every hour of mental agony which he had endured from the moment when he had tricked Pierre to his discovery that Donovan had known all the time of that tragedy at the bank.

Fear, remorse, uncertainty, had assailed him with increasing strength. Step by step the net of circumstances had been drawn about him. And now the inevitable crisis! The dangers between which ne must choose were a palling. Another touch and the ambitious bank clerk would become a desperate animal ready to kill or to be killed.

"Well, what are we going to do?" he demanded at last, "What would you suggest?" asked Donovan with grim humor, "Well, and the state of the state of "What else can I do?" snarled Bruce. "It's him or me, ain't it?" Donovan rose to his feet, "Come on. We've spent more time now with this palayer than we had any right to."

"Where are we going?" cried Bruce leaping to his feet. "To Dripping Spring first, then to Red Butte. "Not me!" shouted the other furlously. "You'll never get me back to Red Butte to be arrested for murder.

He glared defiantly at the older man who, his patience exhausted, had already started toward the packs and the canteen. The perils that faced Bruce, whichever way he turned, had brought him to the Bruce stooped and took up the canteen.

by Harold Bell Wright CELEBRATE KERBY FOWER FYTENCION POWER EXTENSION ALL-DAY

Kerby, pioneer mining town and former county seat of Josephine county was the scene of a big all-day celebration. Sunday, attended by hundreds of visitors from southern Oregon and northern California. The celebration was put on by the Illinois Valley grange and Kerby Post of the American Legion in honor of the coming of Copeo service to the Illinois valley. The competition a new 22-mile extension by the California Oregon Power Company means that an abundant supply of electricity is now available for the use of the homes and farms of this fertile valley and assures ample power for future industrial expansion.

Visitors at Kerby Sunday found many varied forms of entertainment. Among the outstanding events were the rodeo, ball game, horse races, athletic eyents, barbecue, aerial "joyrides" over the valley and a dance in the evening. A speaking program and bard concert opened the program in the morning with several well known speakers from Medford.

A. E. Reames of this city gave an interesting talk citing many interesting experiences of pioneer days.

The construction of the newly completed line has proved a boon to the local employment situation, a large number of men having been employed during the past few months on the Copco project. In acordane with the usual policy of the California Oregon Power Company, local labor and materials were used to the greatest possible extent.

The new line provides electric service for the communities of Kerby, Selma and Deer Creek as well as many homes and farms in the Illinois talley.
