A List of Choice Irises

With the planting season for irises now at hand, one naturally wonders what are the good dependable varieties. This list has been selected with great care, to include only vigorous kinds. Under each color group the first kinds given are now in the 85-cent class, and those following are more expensive, up to the $25 aristocrats which are still new and rare. So from this list you may select to suit your purse. While it is not complete, it will be helpful in ordering varieties with which one is not familiar.

CULINARY CRAFT....

By Estella Dorgan, Director of Home Service, California Oregon Power Co.

Cold Beginnings

In spite of the old saying about good beginnings making poor endings, there is no denying that a cool and refreshing cocktail served as the first course of dinner these evenings usually puts us in a frame of mind to enjoy and appreciate the food which follows. This custom seems to have become quite general but, for some reason, very little imagination is being used in varying the combinations. Now one can tire of the same cocktail as easily as the same desert, so let us change the ingredients often, use simple combinations and be sure they are always very cold. That will mean that they will be easy to make and certain to please.

Tomato Sauerkraut-Juice Cocktail Use heavy pack tomatoes and put them thru two very fine sieves— 2 parts tomato stock 1 part sauerkraut juice Shake well and serve very cold.

Melon Cocktails

Cut balls or cubes of fruit Place chilled ice in bottom of glass, fill with melon and sprinkle with powdered sugar. Chill. White Cherry Cocktail Mix white cherries, pineapple and grapefruit. Serve with dressing made of maraschino syrup, pineapple and cherry syrup, lemon juice and a few grains of salt.

Orange Mint Cocktail

3 oranges, divided into segments (all membrane being removed) 2 T. fresh mint, minced 1 T. lemon juice Powdered sugar. Mix together orange pulp, minced mint and lemon juice with enough powdered sugar to sweeten. Let chill at least two hours. Decorate with sprig of mint.

White Scarf With Black and White Suit Strikes Note Repeated in Hat Trimming

It's scarves and suits this season. At the left Fay Wray wears a scarf of white faille with a suit of black and white tweed. Her hat has the material of the scarf for a clever side effect. At the right Eleanor Boardman wears a smart tailored tweed suit set off with ascot tie and close fitting hat.

Healthy Tan Holds No Terrors For This Season's Debutantes

Miss Jean Woodson is among the debutantes of Washington's winter season who refuse to let coming out plans interfere with summer's enjoyment. She's more interested in hiking and swimming than in selecting gowns for the approaching social festivities.

By Sue McNamara WASHINGTON (AP)—Tan has no terrors for the capital girls looking forward to a debut next fall. The 1932 debutante places health and fun above mere white shoulders.

What she loses in the whiteness of her skin, she gains in poise, strength and grace with which to face her first Washington social season.

Rather than forego the outdoor joys of summer days of the coming crop are letting tan and sunburn tint camellia skins a deep maroon or brown.

The ballroom of a leading hotel has been engaged ever since last Christmas for the coming-out tea dance of Miss Jean Woodson next Christmas day.

But Miss Woodson is just now so engrossed in hiking, swimming and horseback riding in the Rocky mountains that she has not even selected the color of gown she will wear for the big event.

She is far more interested just now in— A tricky riding outfit of brown linen and brown felt hat to which she adds variety with various pastel tinted ties and handkerchiefs.

Decorations For The Home

By Jane Suedicor

The book contains nearly three hundred designs for furniture of many types. His advice to upholsterers is interesting reading. For instance, "Mahogany chairs should have the seats of horsehair, plain, striped or chequered, or cane bottoms with cushions, the cases of which should be covered with the same as the curtains." For the painted furniture he advises printed cottons and linens. Pole fire-screens should, according to the guide, "be ornamented with maps, Chinese figures, or needlework."

Quoting again from the "Guide," we learn that "draperies for beds may be executed of almost any stuff, which the loom produces. White dimity, plain or corded, is peculiarly applicable, which, with a gym heading, produces an effect of elegance and neatness, truly agreeable."

Green was his favorite color and he preferred stripes to all other designs.

A Hepplewhite room is irreplaceable. It has lightness with dignity and no frivolous about it. Hepplewhite furniture blends well with other straight-legged pieces but is not at home with curved cabriole supports. One writer says "it is purely a matter of sentiment, but there seems always a necessity for completing a Hepplewhite table with a porcelain vase of old fashioned garden flowers. Wall flowers set off satinwood astonishingly."

Knitting Booms In Australia As Slump's Result

CANBERRA, Australia (AP)—Remarkable revival of needlework and knitting is reported throughout Australia.

Shopkeepers' sales of needles, knitting and sewing yarns and other needlework materials during the past few months have been unprecedented.

It is a result of the depression. Reduced incomes have necessitated household and clothing economies. Daughters now out of employment cannot sit idly at home, so they get busy with knitting needles.

Then there is the greater need and more urgent appeals by benevolent societies, and many a commuter spends traveling time each day in making garments for the needy.

All this female industry is having another effect, too. There has been an amazing slump in the price of women's wear and several old established businesses that dealt in rich goods have failed.

CABINET WIVES LIKE GREEN FOR PARTIES

WASHINGTON (AP)—Green is the choice of several of the cabinet wives for summer wear.

At a recent white House garden party Mrs. William O. Mitchell, wife of the attorney general, wore a gown of Lanvin green printed crepe with a large black hat. Mrs. Walter Brown, wife of the postmaster general, was also in green with a hat to match.

BARRED BY LORDS, PEERESSES STRIVE FOR EQUAL RIGHTS

LONDON (AP)—British peeresses in their own right want to sit in the house of lords and are making a determined effort to crash the gate of that famous hall.

There are about 30 in all, led by Lady Rhonda, a woman of action who is, among other things, a company director and editor of a lively topical magazine.

So far their luck has been bad. Prime Minister MacDonald is sympathetic, but says it is up to the house of lords.

The lords, no little ghastr, say, "No," or merely, "My word."

The government says the removal of sex discrimination destroyed the prohibition against peeresses.

The lords say there is nothing on the statute books which would permit their admission.

The ladies say it is a vicious circle and that they intend to petition the king.

The battle has been going on since 1919 and Viscount Astor twice has been defeated when he introduced bills in the house of lords to remedy the situation.

MEN USING SCENT BUT LIKE IT MILD

WASHINGTON (AP)—Men are using the "mild" powders and toilet waters, a leading department store reports.

A certain brand which is not clove-scented finds many masculine patrons. They purchase talcum powder, scented soap and toilet water.

Women sometimes buy the same brand for their husbands that they do for themselves.

Dull Fabrics Top Fall Mode With Black Hailed as Leader

By Diana Merwin (Associated Press Fashion Editor) PARIS (AP)—Richness is the rule for early fall fabrics.

Following predictions of eighteenth century sumptuousness in the winter mode, materials for early autumn, so far shown, display quiet elegance and richness in weave and sheen.

Dull fabrics dominate the mode. New lames are seen, displaying a treatment of metal threads used as a discreet background for dull satins or crepes, instead of forming gilded patterns as formerly.

Moires in heavy rich watered silks, woven to drape voluptuously to the figure, also promise to be of the formal fall mode.

Many dull surfaced silks are termed with figures of the same but of another fabric.

Black is hailed as the outstanding winter color by one prominent purveyor, while others promise fast rich dark colors.

SAILOR COLLAR ON EVENING GOWN

PARIS (AP)—Jack Tar's sailor collar is a new wrinkle on madame's new evening gown. Some of the newest white crepe or satin dinner frocks have matching sailor collars falling half way down the back of the gown.

Necklines on such frocks are necessarily high.

North of the river gasolene was selling at 20 1/2 cents a gallon, and on the south side 21 1/2 cents was the prevailing price.

TO PRESERVE FOODS CLEAN REFRIGERATOR

Whether you buy your ice from the ice man or freeze your own ice cubes in the latest model mechanical refrigerator, it's important to keep the ice chest in top-notch condition, especially during the warm weather months; in either type of equipment, cleanliness as well as cold is necessary to check the growth of bacteria.

help to keep the various food flavors from mixing and to preserve the natural moisture of foods. Only spotlessly clean dishes should be placed in the refrigerator. Milk and cream bottles should be wiped off with a soapy cloth and thoroughly dried. If spilled foods are mopped up immediately with luke-warm soap-suds cleaning will never be difficult.

About once a week, empty the refrigerator of every bit of food, and wash shelves and walls with tepid water and soap to which a little baking soda has been applied. Wipe off the outside with a damp, soapy cloth. If your refrigerator is the old fashioned kind you will need to clean the drain pipe and trap as well.

RED IN ALL SHADES TO BE FALL COLOR

NEW YORK (AP)—Red is the most talked-of color for fall. The shades vary all the way from brick to dark carnation, including geranium, magenta and bordeaux. A rich wine red promises to be the most fashionable tint.
