James Dunn Scoring Fox Craterian Hit

Absolute faithfulness to the theme of the original story and play, rich ness of emotion, human appeal and laviahness of production mark the film version of Vina Delmar's "Bad Giri," now playing at the Fox Craterian.

James Dunn, as the husband in the picture, a newcorner to films, scored a sweeping personal triumph with his realistic potrayal. This young man radiates screen personal-ity and is headed for the heights.

er. The department of agriculture has found that he still clings to these newly acquired advantages despite the hard socks of advanty. His standard of living has proh-ably decline more during the prea-ent period of economic instability than in any equal period in many years, in the opinion of Dr. T. B. Manny, senior agricultural econo-finist. This is especially true, he says in the south. Dr. Manny on a recent trip through that section to observe social con-ditions noted a white farmer still driving his aged automobile to town while his children were dreased in burlap, the best he could afford. The burden of greatly increased taxation, he says, removes a large share of farm income which might otherwise be devoted to improved living.
