LOCAL WOMAN IS HAPPY OVER SALE OF RANCH STORY

Many people dream dreams that never become realizations, especially in the field of writing, but Mrs. Nellie von der Hellen of Eagle Point is an exception to the rule. She believes her dreams are coming true since receipt of a letter yesterday which announces that the Ladies' Home Journal is going to buy one of her articles.

The letter is from Grames Lortmer, associate editor of the well-known magazine. It carries a very personal interest and expression of appreciation of Mrs. von der Hellen's work.

"I'm happy to be able to write you that we like your article, 'Judy O'Grady of the Far West' very much indeed," the letter reads, "and with a little revision we will buy it for the Ladies' Home Journal."

Mrs. von der Hellen is to receive $100 for the article and the associate editor requests additional information concerning the local writer's life.

"You have a mighty nice touch and I think that you might very possibly write a whole book about your life," the letter concludes.

Houghton Mifflin have published two books by Anne Ellis, who like yourself had no particular literary training, but she did have a full and interesting life and was able to write about it. I would suggest that you send a copy of your article to Mr. Ira Rich Kent of Houghton Mifflin, saying that the Journal is buying it and that we suggested that you write them, because we thought they might see the possibility of your doing a book on your life for them."

Mrs. von der Hellen lives on a ranch near Eagle Point and has hosts of friends in Medford, who have anticipated success for her since her first writing came to their attention. Many of her stories for children have been published in The Mail Tribune and her radio plays are frequently heard in broadcasts from station KMED.

Her little stories and plays have always expressed an understanding and sympathy, which much modern fiction lacks. She has continued to write them, striving always for something better in spite of the farm duties, which have always crowded her writing time.

One of her favorite children's stories she wrote for the entertainment of her two young sons and little daughter, who with her husband, Carl von der Hellen, rejoice with her today over the letter, which "brought such very good news."

Assistant Forest Supervisor Karl Jenouch is spending this week at Lake of the Woods surveying new home sites there, and Assistant Forest Supervisor Norman White left yesterday for a week's visit with relatives at Oregon City.

This leaves Supervisor Hugh B. Rankin alone, not only to look after executive details, but also to preside at the headquarters phone switchboard here in phone connection with all the forest lookouts and other strategic points of the forest, as central dispatcher.

FOREST LOOKOUTS RETAINED ON DUTY

The recent rains in combination with the cooler weather have so much decreased the fire hazard in Crater national park that the over 30 patrolmen in that forest have been relieved from duty for the year, not to be recalled unless some special hazard should arise before general heavy rains set in, but the forest lookouts will all be kept on duty until September 30th, and possibly later if weather conditions warrant.
