College Expert Reveals Secrets of Baking Pear

(By Jeannette Cramer in the Oregonian)

Every once in a while the fruit desert lover finds in some tearoom a glossy baked pear, possibly spiced a little, perhaps bedecked with blanched almonds, perhaps floating just in its own rich syrup. In any case, the perfect baked pear is a delicacy.

Few home cooks realize the deliciousness of the later varieties of pears, when baked. Bosc, D'Anjou and Comice pears are all coming into market now, and all of them can be baked with perfect results. But richness and flavor are not attained by short baking. This is proved by many experiments conducted within the last year or two by Miss Agnes Kolshorn, assistant professor of foods and nutrition at Oregon State college. Miss Kolshorn's findings have just been published in a bulletin issued by the college experiment station.

A complete reading of the bulletin is not necessary for the home cook, though it would bring to light many interesting facts.

Miss Kolshorn baked literally dozens of boxes of pears in the course of finding all these facts. They were baked slowly, and in a fast oven. They were baked in much syrup and in just a little, with a great deal of sugar and with not so much. Then they were served hot and cold, flavors compared, and finally the best suggestions worked out for both the baking and serving.

Here they are:
The same methods of baking are applicable to Bosc, Comice and D'Anjou pears.

"Pears may be baked either peeled or not peeled. The skin contributes a definite flavor, aids in preventing shrinkage, and hinders sugar penetration.

"A covered baking dish is preferable. An undesirable discoloration takes place when peeled pears are baked uncovered.

"The quantity of sugar added affects appearance and texture as well as flavor of pears. One-fourth to one-third cup of sugar is desirable quantity for four pears, size 120.

"Use of a small amount of water in relation to the sugar results in a well-glazed product. When a large amount of water is used, baked pears are similar to the stewed fruit.

"A baking time of two and a half hours at 300 degrees Fahrenheit gives approximately the same results as one and a half hours at 400 degrees Fahrenheit.

"Baked pears either hot or well-chilled are preferable to those at room temperature.

"Thoroughly baked pears do not undergo changes in appearance or flavor when properly kept at a cool temperature. A quantity sufficient for several meals may be baked at one time."

D. D. Randall, missionary American Sunday School Union in the southwest counties of Oregon, has completed his report for the past year, closing September first. Accompanied by J. J. Ray of Portland he is now spending a few days in Medford on duties connected with the organization. His report shows work conducted in more than 40 rural communities. He has maintained 21 Sunday schools and delivered 240 sermons. In doing this work he has traveled nearly 25,000 miles and has distributed 600 Bibles, testaments and gospels in rural homes. He has also organized young peoples societies, prayer meetings and training classes.

During the past summer Mr. Randall has supervised 11 Daily Vacation Bible schools, in which 332 children were gathered for two weeks of intensive Bible study. Seventeen teachers from ten different denominations assisted in these schools. As a result of the year's work more than 100 conversions are reported.

REGIONAL MEET RED X MONDAY

The fiftieth anniversary Regional conference of the American Red Cross will open at the Presbyterian church in this city tomorrow morning.

Registration of delegates will begin at 9:30 o'clock. The program will open at 10 o'clock and continue through the day with luncheon at the Hotel Medford at noon with members of the Kiwanis club.

The luncheon speaker will be Dr. William DeKleine, who has announced as his subject, "Medical Activities of the Red Cross in the Drought Relief."

Red Cross executives from all sections of southern Oregon and northern California will attend the conference at which J. C. Thompson, chairman, will preside. The list of speakers will include Red Cross workers from several states.

Unemployment and the transient problem will hold prominent places on the program. All county directors are especially urged to attend this conference.

Increased Interest in Cecil and Sally
The affairs of Cecil and Sally, that engaging pair of youngsters scheduled to be heard on station KMMB at 7:15 o'clock every night except Sunday, continue to grow more complicated all the time, and something of a crisis approaches during the coming week.

Sally's grandfather is coming to visit. Her uncle is planning to buy a farm for the old gentleman, but has to borrow some money from a bank to put the deal over. Unfortunately for Cecil, the bank is operated by his rival's father. The rival is Alexander, who likes Sally a little bit too much for Cecil's comfort. Besides, Alexander has a lot more spending money than Cecil, and a fine new sport roadster.

Uncle Thomas has instructed Sally to be as nice as possible to Alexander in order to help the loan along with Alexander's father. Cecil either has to get entirely out of the picture or be nice to Alexander along with Sally, and he isn't enjoying the ordeal very much. One of the highlights of the coming week's broadcasting is the dinner party which Sally gives, and in which Mamie Snodgrass, the talkative maid, takes an important and effective part—Adv.

THWARTS PROWLERS, BASHED ON HEAD

Ed Scheffel, who had fallen asleep in a chair at the K. P. hall late Friday night was awakened by two young men, who were attempting to rob the money case, he reported to police yesterday.

When he asked what they were doing, they struck him over the head with a flash light, causing a severe cut.

Scheffel said that they failed to get any money. A report was also made to the local station that robbers had also entered the Medford Lumber company, but as the safe was locked, they failed to get anything. This is the third attempt at robbing the lumber company in recent months, according to the officers. It is thought the same parties were responsible for both attempts.
