BOOKS FOR BLIND IN CONGRESS LIBRARY

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Publication and distribution of a select list of books for the blind is to be made soon by the Library of Congress.

Close Up the Fear Factory

The best editorial we have seen on the all-absorbing topic of the depression is the following written by Elbert Hubbard. It expresses so perfectly the attitude this paper has taken toward what we call "hard times" that it is printed in full as follows:

Leaving out the Pollyanna talk, one of two things is going to happen to business... It is going to the demdition Bow-Wows, Or...

It is coming back stronger than ever!! I won't prophesy for you; I merely point out that these are the only alternatives.

If it is to the Bow-Wows we are bound, let's close up our business, take the cash, and sit on it, and go to the dogs as comfortably as possible, making the journey as long and pleasant as we can!

If business is coming back stronger than ever, let's cut out the whining, throw off our fearful, do-nothing, paralytic state of mind and go to work to speed its return!!

DON'T say that you should start up that factory overnight; or cease trimming overhead; or start reckless spending without regard for overhead. I recommend to no man that he become a fool in purple to avoid being a fool in yellow...

But I do recommend that you cease being yellow. Stop planning with fear in your heart. Plans made in fear reflect fear, contaminate with blight everything they touch.

If you can't plan with courage, don't plan. Shut down the plant, draw the fires, put up the shutters, turn the key in the door, and go South. Business is better without you.

If business is bound bow-wow wise, going South is the right thing to do. If it's coming back stronger than ever, there's nothing to be afraid of...

BUT... either shut up your Fear Factory and quit... or plan ahead with intelligent confidence which the situation deserves.

Any other policy is a Dog-in-the-Manger policy; you won't plan with courage, or let your neighbor do it. It's up to you—get in the progress parade or get off the road in favor of others who have the courage and the motive power to move!

The Law Should Step In

OVER the week-end two more Oregon hunters were killed for deer. It seems to us about time the law took a hand in this ghastly business.

For there is a law, we believe, which holds that where death results from the inexcusably careless handling of fire arms, the responsible party is guilty of involuntary manslaughter.

Only a person inexcusably careless can possibly mistake a human being for a deer. Only the hunter who is willing to shoot first and investigate afterward, who refuses to exercise ordinary caution and bangs away at everything in the woods that moves, can possibly take the life of a fellow nimir.

But in recent years the law has never been enforced. There is so much sympathy for the individual who accidentally kills another hunter, that legal proceedings following such a tragedy have come to be a farce.

No Worry About Children. Eight Centuries of Sleep. Watch Silver, Sterling. About Col. Roosevelt.

Copyright King Features Synd. Inc. Professor Julian S. Huxley tells the British Association for the Advancement of Science that birth control threatens the earth's population.

The unwanted child is not an asset. If those that do not want children refrain from having them, so much the better. Their abstinence will improve the race.

And there is no need to worry because "the poor have more children. Professors have few, girls from colleges fewer, and do not want what they have."

When New York City's seven million people turned their clocks back one hour on Saturday night each of them, if he got up at the usual hour next day, gained one hour's sleep.

American generally would gain a thousand centuries in progress if they could realize the importance of sleep, and use wisely the energy that sleep produces.

Senator Borah... to the question, "When will conditions improve?" replied: "Sixty days before anyone knows the change has come."

Intelligent men, looking for the change, will watch British conditions; the rise or fall of the pound, and the increase in the price of silver, if that price increases.

It should increase, for the world, including this rich country, needs more currency. Two piles of gold, one in Paris, one in Washington, cannot finance all creation.

The world is all one market and world conditions will move upward with our own.

Callaux, one of the most intelligent of the very intelligent Frenchmen, advocates restoration of silver's value. He, who helped Poincare in restoring France to a gold basis, and the vast accumulation of gold in France, says now that the world's depression is caused by a penury of monetary metals and silver, which has been stupidly demonetized, should be rehabilitated.

We have the silver, can produce it—hundreds of millions of ounces a year. The world needs more real money for its prosperity, and being unable to produce enough gold, it should, under wise regulation, restore silver's value.

Colonel Theodore Roosevelt spent the week end at Rapidan, with President Hoover. Vice-President Curtis is said to want another term. Suppose Colonel Roosevelt should be chosen as Mr. Hoover's running mate, another Theodore Roosevelt nominated for Vice-President. What effect would that have on the election?

To what extent would it offset the magic of the Roosevelt name at the head of the Democratic ticket, if Franklin Roosevelt were to be nominated? The Republican party could say: "We offer you the son of the original Roosevelt." Would that help?

New York state appoints a "big" three" to spend twenty millions, on unemployment relief. To avoid the dole, no money will be paid except for labor. No work, no cash.

But politicians can make wages very much like the dole and as painless.

In New York's suburbs five gentlemen were "working for wages" cutting grass along a public highway. Of the five, who had bought automobiles, one, at 10 o'clock in the morning, sat in his car, two leaned against the car in deep discussion, and two swung their... the languidly against the weeds and grass, actually earning, perhaps, 4 cents an hour in gentle exercise good for the abdominal muscles.

SYMPATHETOMY FOR THROMBOANGIITIS AND RAYNAUD'S AFFECTION.

Recently I cited here the very satisfactory results achieved in the majority of cases of thromboangiitis obliterans and Raynaud's affection by the operation known as sympathectomy—removing ganglia of the sympathetic nervous system.

A French physician named by the name of Dies has now reported the results of lumbar sympathectomy in a series of 75 cases, with favorable results in most of them.

This authority has found that the removal of the ganglions or way-stations of the sympathetic nerves most satisfactorily done under general anesthesia, rather than general anesthesia.

Talks To Parents

DISFIGUREMENTS. By Alice Judson Peale. All of us know people who suffer from some affliction—a crippled arm, a disfiguring birthmark, a club foot.

Some of these people show by their behavior that they have been deeply marked in mind as well. Others appear to have triumphed over their difficulty, and these personalities cannot fail to arouse respect and even admiration.

Why is it that with some a disfigurement may cripple the whole personality, while with others it may go almost unremarked, because of the individual's splendid poise? The difference lies almost wholly in the way the disfigurement was accepted in childhood.

Sometimes parents of such children are especially protective, solicitous, over-sensitive for them. This attitude readily communicates itself to the child. Since his elders feel his affliction so keenly, he feels it, too, and reacts to it in a variety of ways.

He may use it to demand extra love and attention and sympathy, or, feeling an element of shame mingled with their love, feel ashamed himself, and shrink from contact with the outside world.

Sometimes the element of shame in the parents' feeling is tinged with resentment against the child for being disfigured, and hence no credit to them.

In such instances the child's growing personality is likely to be strongly colored with feelings of hate and impulses toward cruelty. But where parents wisely accept disfigurement without too much emotion, in a matter-of-fact way, the child, too, will be able to accept it in that light.

He will not think too much about it, nor even feel it too painfully when other children taunt him. The fact that he is not much hurt by them tends to make them forget it, and accept him as one of them.
