

EAGLE PT. REGION PROSPERING WITH MANY NEW HOMES

Abundant Pasture Draws Cattle and Sheep From Valley Area—Fall Building Activity Is Brisk

EAGLE POINT, Ore., Sept. 29.—(Special)—The number of cattle arriving from neighboring sections for pasturing on the clover and alfalfa fields here indicate the favorable impression that Eagle Point district has made throughout the valley with its abundant forage crops. Good hay crops have been cut and the new growth which has sprung up is providing excellent pasturage. An increasing number of sheep are being pastured on the fields of the Farm Properties, Inc., which also take care of part of the thoroughbred Jersey stock of Postmaster Warner of Medford. C. C. Hoover arrived September 27 with a number of cattle to be placed on the Jack Groh ranch until the winter blue grass fields have reached their full carrying capacity. Many improvements noted over the district show that this section is prospering. The bungalow across the street from the school house, being built by Mrs. Blanche Stanley, is rapidly nearing completion. Cliff Hickson and family are occupying their new home on the Lake Creek road and Mr. and Mrs. John Ragsdale have set the date of their housewarming for October 10. Excavation for the Rogue River Valley Herald's new home on the Crater Lake highway has been completed and construction work will soon begin. Two new residences have been built on the opposite side of the highway just back of J. J. Merkle's place. Other homes are under construction further up the Crater Lake highway.

EAGLE PT. SCHOOL BUDGET REDUCED FOR COMING YEAR

EAGLE POINT, Ore., Sept. 29.—(Special)—Voters of school district No. 9 are notified of a meeting called for October 1 at 8 p. m. for the purpose of discussing the budget proposed for the ensuing fiscal year. Decided cuts have been made in expenditures of former years and, in addition, cost of insuring the old school building and gymnasium have been included. These buildings have heretofore carried no insurance. The expenditures for the year are estimated at $19,999.50, which is $5000 less than that of three years ago. The receipts, which include state and county school funds, elementary school fund and special district tax, are $7,251.81. This makes an amount to be raised of $2747.69. Questions relating to accepting pupils from other school districts will also come up for consideration.

HEALTH INSTITUTE TO BE HELD HERE

Mrs. Zadie Orr Dunbar will be in this city next month to conduct an institute for all health workers at the Y. W. C. A., October 12. The program for the event will be announced later by the Jackson County Public Health association. Plans for the winter were outlined at a recent meeting of the executive board of the association. A new plan called the chart system will be adopted in connection with the honor roll in order to give all schools an opportunity to enter the competition. An outline of the work for the county nurses and Sanitary Engineer Clyde P. Smith was presented at the meeting by Dr. B. C. Wilson, who also described the work he will carry on during the winter. An extensive publicity campaign is being undertaken to acquaint the public with the objects and aims of the Jackson County Public Health association.

Eagle Pt. Grange Club Will Meet

EAGLE POINT, Ore., Sept. 29.—(Special)—Regular meeting of the Home Economics club of the Eagle Point Grange will be held September 30 at the Grange hall. Mrs. Tom Vestal, secretary of the club, will preside in the absence of the president, Mrs. W. L. Childreth, who will be unable to attend because of illness. All members and their friends are urged to be present.

All Governments Declared Failure

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—(AP)—Former Senator Gilbert H. Hitchcock, publisher of the Omaha World-Herald, returned from a fourth month's tour of Europe today and termed governments all over the world failures. He said they were taxing people to death. The Germans have no desire for war, he said, but France is living in dread of war and as a result, is spending great sums on armament.

SAM BY FREEMAN LINCOLN

SYNOPSIS: Sam Sherrill, the tall slim daughter of an aristocratic family that has gone "down hill" makes intensely for wealth. "It's not unique to want money," she tells Freddy Munson, whom she is dating to her home one winter afternoon. Sam lives in a picturesque stable, near Homagate. The unusual family mansion. "Money is disgusting," Freddy says. He wonders why Sam is unhappy about her status when she looks so smart in green that brightens her dark hair and purple-blue eyes. At the stable, Freddy meets Fourth Aldersa, Sam's stepfather, who believes in social distinction. When Peck Abbott, young owner of the Express, the newspaper on which Sam and Freddy are employed, comes in, Freddy tells Sam that Peck Abbott is in love with her. Sam, saying, "I just called to ask you to promise not to marry Peck Abbott."

Chapter 3 WHAT PRICE FREEDOM? SAM laughed. "I'll promise not to marry him tonight." "Good. Will you have lunch with me tomorrow?" Freddy asked. "All right," said Sam.

The next morning Sam went down to the living room where the breakfast table had been set. Martha Givens came in with ice water. Martha was the maid of all work. She was a pretty little brunette, inclined to plumpness and pessimism. Martha retired to the kitchen.

just as Nelson Aldersa, Sam's half-brother, came down stairs, buttoning his vest. "Good morning, Sonny," Sam said. "You always butter the last button of your vest as you put your left foot on the bottom step. What would happen if you bought a suit with five buttons on the vest instead of six?"

Nelson Aldersa shook his head wearily. "You'll never know because you'll never catch me with a new suit."

Fourth Aldersa joined them at the table. He regarded his son solemnly. "Where were you last night, Nelson? You slink out night after night without telling me where you are going. Why don't you associate with people of your own class?"

"My friends are my own affair," Nelson said sullenly. Sam leaned forward. "Stop it, both of you! Listen to me. The mortgage interest is due on the fifteenth."

"Don't worry about the mortgage," said Fourth. "I'll take care of that."

Nelson raised his eyebrows. When breakfast was over Nelson disappeared into the kitchen, where he could be heard talking to Martha Givens in a low tone. Fourth stalked out the front door.

Salesmanship of books was not an art that appealed to Fourth. He made nine calls, and on no occasion did he succeed in interviewing his prospective customer. By the time that luncheon hour arrived there was only one thing left to do. He telephoned Mrs. Eugenie Frye and told her that he had a new book which might interest her.

Mrs. Frye's tone was warm, even eager. "Can you come today? My lunch is merely a lonely widow's meal. You couldn't join me?" Fourth accepted, and hung up the receiver wearily.

Sam Sherrill came into the Express building at one o'clock. She saw Freddy Munson leaning against the wall in front of the elevators; the collar of his overcoat was turned up at the back and the brim of his felt hat was pulled well down over his eyes. He was reading the Express.
