

MEDFORD JUNIORS AND S.O.N.S. WIN GRIDIRON CLASHES

Football games in southern Oregon yesterday ended with the following scores:

Southern Oregon Normal, 9; Humboldt Teachers, 7.

Medford Juniors, 39; Glendale High, 0.

Klamath Falls High, 21; Ashland High, 12.

The Southern Oregon Normal won over the Humboldt Teachers, by the margin of a touchdown gained in the first quarter. The Sons scored a touchdown in the third quarter, and the Humboldt squad, in a fourth quarter rally, put over a touchdown. The teams battled on even terms throughout the first half.

Klamath Falls, dedicating their new athletic field, upset the dope by defeating Ashland High, 21 to 12. Neither team was able to score in the first half, but the Pelicans unleashed an air attack in the third period. The Klamath squad outwitted the Lithians, and played a dashing game. Over 2500 people saw the contest, and all business houses closed in honor of the occasion.

Medford junior high squad yesterday defeated the small, Glendale high eleven, 38 to 0, before a large crowd, mostly junior high students, at Van Scoyoc field.

Glendale was unable to score against their bulky and more experienced opponents and the ball was kept constantly in Glendale territory. Medford tore through the Glendale defense, making large gains on end runs and line plunges, although their over-eagerness cost them much in penalties.

Medford was outplayed by the invaders. Thurman starred for the locals with three touchdowns.

The first touchdown came when Glendale, after being pushed steadily back, tried to kick from their goal line. The punt was blocked, the ball fell over Glendale's line and Luman fell on it, scoring for Medford. Thurman failed to convert the kick.

Fullback Thurman made the second touchdown when he galloped around right end on a 50-yard run, tore through the scattered forces of the invaders and over the line. He failed to kick the extra point.

In the second quarter Thurman wriggled and twisted his way through the line for another touchdown. The locals scored the extra point on a line buck.

The ball was then run deep into Glendale territory by a series of end runs and line bucks. Evans carried the ball over for a touchdown on a line buck. The extra point was not converted.

Swank dodged around left end with several Glendale players on his heels and over the line. Medford bucked the extra point.

The last scoring was done by Thurman, who tore around left end for the sixth touchdown, but Medford failed to convert.

The lineup:

INTEREST CENTERS IN SEATTLE CLASH

SEATTLE, Oct. 10.—(AP)—Championship hopes of Oregon and Washington in the Pacific coast conference football race hinged on the outcome of their annual gridiron battle here today in the Washington stadium.

Closer to 30,000 spectators, including Clyde Parnbom and Hugh Herndon, Jr., the first men to ever accomplish the feat of flying over the Pacific ocean in one hop, were expected to watch the two teams in their struggle for victory.

The contest was the first "big game" of the season for Oregon and Washington and victory for one meant the dashing of title aspirations for the other.

DONIE BUSH OUT AS SOX MANAGER

CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—(AP)—Donie Bush, hard luck man of baseball, has given up the difficult task of attempting to make a winner out of the White Sox.

After two years, during which team injuries robbed him of what chances he had to lead the team into first division in the American league, the little Irishman turned in his resignation last night. His only comment was that he "didn't fit into the White Sox organization."

His resignation was accepted and the White Sox started looking around for his successor, who may be Brian "Red" Fisher, the veteran White Sox pitcher.

Pepper Martin Pines to Be Big League Pitcher

By Edward J. Nell.
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 10.—(AP)—John "Pepper" Martin knows that he is a fine outfielder. He knows that he can hit, field, and run bases. But he is absolutely certain that an even greater pitcher was wasted when big league managers converted him to center field.

"I could handcuff these guys," he insists. "What a fast ball I had, what a curve. Gee, I'd like to be a big league pitcher."

Perhaps it isn't generally known that Pepper, the hitting, base-running, glamorous Cardinal hero of the world series, broke into baseball as a right handed pitcher. And he almost passed out of it for good as a second baseman and a shortstop.

That was way back in his Oklahoma days. You see Pepper was born 27 years ago in Temple, Okla., down near the Texas border, but his father, something of a politician, got a job in the capital at Oklahoma City and moved the family there.

When it came to playing baseball, which Pepper loves above everything else in the world, perhaps except hunting, Oklahoma City offered him little. He was 19 when he lost his job as assistant lineman with an electric light and power company for going off duck hunting, and of course with his job he lost his place on the company ball team.

Someone suggested that he try pro ball, but Pepper couldn't see where he was good enough for that, but it was worth a try. To his amazement Guthrie, in the Oklahoma league, took him on to test his claim that he was a shortstop and a pitcher.

Pepper lasted three days as a shortstop. His fielding was the worst ever seen, even in the Oklahoma league. But he insisted he could pitch, and he did. He once out-pitched Carl Hubbell, now the ace left-hander of the New York Giants, and one day he won both games of a double header for Guthrie against Bristol. The league blew up the ville in the east Texas circuit.

But that didn't faze Pepper. He was hunting. He always could hit. The Cards shipped him to Houston, another link of their extensive farm chain, in 1927.

"What are you?" Branch Rickey asked him.

"A pitcher," Pepper insisted.

"No sir," the manager butted in. "You're a second baseman. You can't fool me."

"All right," said Rickey, "let's not argue. Let's compromise. You're an outfielder."

And the baseball world has some slight suspicion today that Rickey was right.

Martin will never forget Greenville, where he first came to the attention of the Cardinals in 1925.

An old major leaguer was playing second base, his last stand. He was old and slow and fading fast. When going badly he used to drop out of the game and put Pepper at second.

Pepper was so terrible that the fans would soon be calling for the old-timer again, bad as he was.

From Greenville Martin went to Fort Smith, a part of the Cardinal system, and they sent him to Syracuse in the old International league in 1926. Burt Shotton, now of the Phillies, was the manager. Burt took one long look at the gawky, powerful youngster, playing soccer with the ball out by second base.

"I'll have to get out of this league," he sighed. "It's getting too tough for me."

But that didn't faze Pepper. He was hunting. He always could hit. The Cards shipped him to Houston, another link of their extensive farm chain, in 1927.

"What are you?" Branch Rickey asked him.

"A pitcher," Pepper insisted.

"No sir," the manager butted in. "You're a second baseman. You can't fool me."

"All right," said Rickey, "let's not argue. Let's compromise. You're an outfielder."

And the baseball world has some slight suspicion today that Rickey was right.

O. S. C. Footballers In Double Victory For Charity Fund

COORVILLE, Ore., Oct. 10.—(AP)—Two visiting football teams went to defeat on Bell field here last night in a doubleheader for charity.

A mixed bunch of O. S. C. reserves and varsity men defeated Linfield, 25 to 0, after the Oregon State Frosh had pounded out a 24 to 0 victory over the Chemawa Indians.
