SELECTING JURY IN CASE AGAINST COUNTY OFFICERS

Selection of a jury in circuit court to hear the damage action of Mrs. Nettie Marco against Dr. B. C. Wilson, county physician and O. W. (Ike) Dunford, county jailer, began this afternoon before Circuit Judge J. T. Brand of Marshfield, the youngest jurist in the state.

Mrs. Marco, an aged woman and recipient of county aid because of ill health, alleges that she was manhandled, thrown in jail and detained and thrown to the pavement last November.

The defendants assert that Mrs. Marco, because of a disturbance at Sacred Heart hospital, was removed to the county courthouse, at the request of hospital authorities, and that after an effort to locate her husband was placed in the women's ward of the county jail, as a matter of common courtesy. When her husband arrived next morning, the defendants say, Mrs. Marco thanked them for their treatment of her.

Following the Marco case, which will take at least a day, the suit of Roy G. Patch against the Pacific Theaters (Holly) Inc., for $50,000 damages, will be started. Patch, a former movie operator at the Holly, alleges that through negligence his eyes were injured.

The number of members required to bring a branch of the association to Medford is 400. Music lovers here hope that a larger membership may be obtained as the larger membership will bring more concerts here.

"5 STAR FINAL"

It's a First National Picture

The last edition of the day's paper which writes first to the day and to a ruined life!

During its private showing I watched the faces of men who had seen thousands of pictures—men to whom pictures were only merchandise to be sold!... THESE MEN, imagine it,—on the edge of their seats—taut—tense—immersed completely—totally—in the crescendo of the sweeping drama on the screen before them... Then the catapulting climax—so powerful—so realistic—so overwhelming—it seemed to engulf not only these men—but the chairs, the room itself, EVERYTHING!

Even now as I write this advertisement—days later—I thrill... at the SHEER GREATNESS, in the UNDESCRIBABLE POWER and the DRAMATIC INTENSITY of

PARK PERSONNEL MOVING TO TOWN FRIDAY IS WORD

It was learned today that the Crater National park headquarters offices and personnel would be moved down next Friday to their winter quarters in the federal building in Medford and also that there were over 800 visitors to see Crater lake last Sunday.

The labor force at the park has been gradually decreased for the past week or so until there are only about 25 or 30 laborers left, with Superintendent Solinsky and the headquarters staff moving down to the city Friday, only a few laborers will be retained and two or three rangers, as the scheduled park improvement work for this year is about completed, and any time now heavy snow and stormy weather is anticipated to set in.

Of course, the rim road contractor will have his remaining force at work as long as the weather permits, but has gradually been diminishing his large force for the past two weeks until only a comparative few are left—enough to man the steam shovels and carry on the work.

SHERIFF RETURNS WITHOUT VENISON

Sheriff Ralph Jennings returned home yesterday with Raymond Baker, from a five days' deer hunt in Lake county, and when asked concerning his success, stated that the emphasis should go on the "hunt."

Although the two men could not find any bucks, the sheriff shot down a coyote. He took great pains to skin the animal, and take the hide into the courthouse to obtain a bounty. Upon reaching the office, however, he discovered that Lake county did not have a bounty on coyotes, so his work was all in vain.

His son Paul is out on a big hunting trip now, and Sheriff Jennings is depending on him to bring in the winter's supply of meat.
