

CAMERAGRAMS

IT'S REALLY A SCARF, though it looks like a frock. Kay Francis, movie star, is displaying this unusual creation. It has semi-raglan sleeves, with a wide band joining the top of the sleeves, forming the scarf. The fur is blue fox, while sun-tan chiffon and gold sequins make the wrap, worn over as evening dress, distinctly novel.

THERE'S CHARM IN THESE ANIMALS and something almost human about all of them. As for the cubs at the left, they were curious about what W. K. Betscher, of the North Carolina Forest Service, at Asheville, N. C., had on his hip. And it seems they found out. The toy monkey was a jockey on the fleet greyhound in a novel race at Charlton Track, London, as shown upper right. The innovation in the races caused much excitement. A wild fawn, lower right, joined these two children tourist bathers in Lake MacDonald, in Glacier National Park. The fawn seems less interested in the kids, than they in it.

ITALY'S STRENGTH IN THE AIR was recently displayed by a fleet of 900 planes, and here is a squadron laying a smoke screen over Florence, Italy, as part of the great aerial pageant. The city was completely covered, thus theoretically protecting it from enemy air attacks. Premier Mussolini viewed the maneuvers.

THINGS WERE BLACK AND WHITE in this battle of soot and flour during the regatta at Southend, England. One contestant had a bag of soot; the other, a bag of flour. The boat rocked precariously while the throwing was going on, and perhaps it tipped over—as it should have done—so we can't tell who won.

COMMEMORATING THE SAILING OF THE "PILGRIM FATHERS," this little group is seen on the site of the Mayflower Stone, at Plymouth, England. It was from this spot that the Pilgrims sailed in their ship, Mayflower, 311 years ago, in 1620, on their historic journey to the rock-bound coast of North America. The above services are held in memory of this great event, and the surrounding atmosphere—wharves, ships, masts, and seamen—lend color to the occasion.

EGYPTIANS IN ANNUAL FESTIVAL TO RIVER NILE are seen here on the banks of the historic river waiting for the "Akaba," the boat which is especially decorated for the occasion, to take them from Kasr El Nil bridge to old Cairo for the celebration. In ancient times the most beautiful virgin maiden was sacrificed to the gods of the Nile, but now a religious ritual has taken the place of the sacrifice.

SHE'S POPULAR in Norway, for she is Princess Ragnhild, daughter of Prince Olaf and Princess Martha of Norway. The little princess is just 15 months old.

CAKE FACE is not a bad name when you win $5 for being one. Gloria June Garfield, nine, won the cake-eating contest at a household show in Los Angeles—and without using her hands, either.

PARADOX! PERMANENT HOME FOR NOMADS! Here is a permanent gypsy home in Surrey, England, tried as an experiment and found to be successful. The nomads are seen with their ramshackle shack in a beautiful natural setting. They live happily, apparently no less free as settlers than as wanderers.

PLOWING IN FAR-AWAY BULGARIA is still done in many parts with oxen, and here is a typical and picturesque landscape at Kazanlik, South Bulgaria. The plow also is antiquated, fashioned entirely of wood. The oxen plod along, seemingly half asleep, and the farmer, with strong hands and brawny arms, manages the plow, which does little more than root up earth.