Declared the most successful event of all time by southern Oregon home makers, the Mail Tribune school of home economics closed yesterday evening. Women from all sections of the valley crowded the theater to hear the latest hints, voiced by Mrs. Ethel Hall, instructor of the school and to participate in the various surprises and special treats offered as entertainment.

JENKINS' COMMENT

licitors of such charity are not wholly worthy.

It is the same feeling that restrains motorists from giving rides to hitch-hikers.

HERE is a story related to this writer recently by a man whose word cannot be doubted:

"In Portland not long ago I was asked for a quarter for a cup of coffee and a sandwich, and gave it rather than say no. But I watched the fellow to whom I gave the quarter and saw him collect from two other people before turning the corner. I followed him around the block and saw him make three other collections.

"So I called a policeman and the man was arrested as a vagrant. When searched at the police station the sum of $25 in small coins was found in his pockets."

NO ONE who is hungry should go unfed. That is unthinkable in a country such as ours. But contributing to the panhandler is probably about as unwise a way of providing help for the needy as can be found.

Barker Describes Pioneer Statue To Local Mothers

At top, statue of pioneer mother to be presented the University of Oregon by Burt Brown Barker, at left. A guest in Medford Tuesday, is seen at right.

The Medford group of Oregon Mothers were privileged at their meeting at the Medford Hotel, Tuesday evening, as they had as their guests, Burt Brown Barker, vice president of the University of Oregon and Mrs. Barker.

Mr. Barker's talk to the mothers was most interesting. He gave the story of the statue 'Oregon Pioneer Mother,' now nearing completion in the New York studio of the famous sculptor, A Phimister Proctor.

The conception of the statue is original with Mr. Barker and is the only version that has ever been made where the pioneer mother is visualized at the end of the trail. Invariably, all ideas and concepts of the pioneer mother carrys thoughts and symbols of Indians, covered wagons, and buffalos. Mr. Barker gave two reasons why he was inspired to create this idea of a pioneer mother.

First, he paid tribute to his mother who was an Oregon Pioneer. Secondly to the famous painting, Whistler's "Mother." It was brought out that the painting enjoys a unique honor. It is the only painting to hang in the Louvre during the lifetime of the artist. The sculptor, Mr. Proctor, in assembling his ideas for a model which would qualify with Mr. Barker's ideal spent several months abroad studying Whistler's "Mother."

The statue of the "Oregon Pioneer Mother" is to be cast in bronze and placed on the quadrangle of the Oregon University. It is a gift of art and love by Burt Brown Barker and Mrs. Barker to the university.

It is to be unveiled and dedicated on Mother's Day next May. The local group of "Oregon Mothers" are already looking forward to this event with keen anticipation and making plans to be present.

NOTED NEBRASKAN HEADED THIS WAY

The visit of A. L. (Doc) Bixby, the oldest newspaper columnist in continuous service of the nation, to Oregon this year has a tinge of sadness, as since his last visit here to see his brother at Jacksonville, the brother passed away a short time ago. It was thought that because of this death, Mr. Bixby, who is 75 years old, might cease his frequent visits to Oregon.

However, this veteran Lincoln, Neb., journalist, whose column has appeared in the Nebraska State Journal every day for more than 14,243 days, and who was awarded several years ago the Kiwanis medal given each year for the outstanding Nebraskan, arrived last week in Portland to visit W. H. Jenkins, his boyhood schoolmate of many years ago at Estherville, Iowa, for a few days, after which he will go to Salem for a visit, and is then expected to visit his late brother's family at Jacksonville, from which place he will go on for a visit with relatives in California, before returning home.
