STEEL HELMETS FOLLOW SELDTE POLITICAL AIMS

BERLIN.—(AP) With the soldier-president Paul von Hindenburg as an honorary member, and more than 1,000,000 followers, Franz Seldte, head of the countrywide national "steel helmets," is a vital force in German politics.

Efforts to organize the League of War Veterans to its present strength out of a mere "putsch" clique. Its motto, coined by him, is: "The Fatherland above all parties."

The collapse of the German empire and the ensuing chaos found Seldte at his home town, Magdeburg. His attempt to organize a counter-revolution there and in Berlin failed, but he succeeded in creating a local association of "front soldiers," based upon war reminiscences, comradeship and self-help.

Franz Seldte thus discovered his organizing talent. On October 1919 he united local groups of former front soldiers and was made chief of the Reich's Association of Front Soldiers.

He made the organization self-supporting and enabled it to publish a newspaper, the "Stahlhelm," which has a circulation of 170,000.

Seldte was born in Magdeburg June 29, 1882. He started to follow his father's profession of chemistry but the world war interrupted his studies. He went to the front as leader of a machine gun section and in 1916 lost his left arm fighting on the Somme.

MARY PINCH HITS WHILE EVA TAKES NEW ASSIGNMENT

By Mary Greiner Kelly
It's fun being back again—only for one week. Eva Hamilton (nee Nealon) who stepped out of the newspaper office into matrimony Saturday night, always was accommodating. She knew in her big journalistic heart that an unbroken diet of domesticity for 20 months was enough to definitely unbalance even a balanced reporter.

But Eva will be back at her desk next Monday morning, severely drawn in a line between connubial and reportorial demands, and the latter will go on as usual.

Yes, it's fun being back. But, with the exception of the old familiar faces, the place just isn't the same. It's all so perfect, so departmental and efficient. Gleaming big machines whir on relentlessly, their great, hungry mouths gulping down "copy" at a nerve racking speed. It's a bit disconcerting to a country gal.

Then, there really isn't anything to find fault with any more. The quaint old news room, with its delicious deficiencies was a marvelous developer of derogatory adjectives in a reporter's vocabulary. It has given place now to a spotless arrangement on the first floor, with plenty of parking space for feet, but none for gum.

Gone is the good old waste paper barrel, invariably aimed at and missed by Arthur and Kop. Gone is the electric fan which took a three month vacation in summer and suddenly popped out, to work overtime during winter. Gone are the yellowed cartoons, clippings and pictures, which illustrated events in the careers of William Jennings Bryan, Thomas Edison and Medford's "Little George."

But, beneath those surface coatings, the spirit is really the same after all. And it's great to be back, a visiting reporter—and down the streets of Medford again.

NO ACTION TAKEN AT GRANGE MEET REGARDING AGENT

The report that the Pomona Grange meeting at Bellview Saturday directly or indirectly, favored the abolition of the county home demonstration agent is untrue according to the official report of the meeting, sent to the Mail Tribune today.

In the report of the meeting in Sunday's issue, the following statement was made: "Grange members improve the grangers thought it best to eliminate the office of county home demonstration agent, contrary to the committee's report."

This statement came from a grange member who attended the meeting and this paper supposed it was correct. But while such a resolution was presented, it was tabled without discussion and no action whatever regarding this office was taken.

A. M. Tyrell, master of the Central Point Grange and other grange officials, asked that a correction be made.

SUCCESS IN MAKING MAYONNAISE LIES IN WAY OIL IS ADDED

"A Little at a Time" is Safest Method. Hills Bros. Use a Similar Rule in Their Patented, Coffee-Roasting Process

Oil, in large amounts, added to mayonnaise ingredients usually makes the mixture separate. It is better to add oil "a little at a time."

There is a similar situation in coffee roasting. Occasionally, big batches can be roasted so much as the same flavor. But you can't depend on it. The sure way is to roast a little at a time. Hills Bros. do, with their patented, Controlled Roasting process.

As the accuracy of the hour-glass depends upon an even, continuous flow—a little at a time—so the uniform flavor of Hills Bros. Coffee is produced by this patented process that roasts evenly, continuously... a little at a time.

FOOD CHATS

by ETHAL M. HALL

The evening preceding All Hallow or All Saints Day or the evening of October 31, traditionally devoted to merry making, the "mystic tomb," the goblins and ghost dances, all give the hostess one great chance of the year to just forget formality and return again to the happy-go-lucky childhood days.

If we are going to entertain either for adults or at a child's party these suggestions, both for food and games may be of interest.

Christmas tree lights may be brought into service, using the chandelier from which to attach the string of lights. These lights should play on pumpkins, witches or black cats for table decoration.

One very effective touch, which never fails to start things off with the traditional shriek, is the black cat mirror. For this, a large mirror is placed in such a way that the guests must face it as they enter the house or when they come into the living room.

Cut a very large cat from black paper, making it large enough to completely hide the mirror. Cut a huge mouth and large eyes from the paper and chalk in the whiskers and other features. The mirror thus fills in the mouth and eyes and as the guests approach it, they see themselves coming out of the eyes and mouth of this monstrous apparition.

Foods for Hallowe'en. A long narrow supper table is best, for when spirits and witches are in the air the nearer to one another the guests can be, the better they will like it.

The menu may well start with hot bouillon to dissipate in a measure the shivery feeling of the surroundings. Sandwiches of all kinds are in order. Some of these should be substantial enough to satisfy the masculine guests, some should also be of the "open-face" type, which lend themselves so well to the symbols of the day.

For example, some may be shaped like cats and spread with caviar or finely minced olives, to give a dark color, with tiny pearl onions for eyes. Round pieces of bread may be spread with pliant cheese and made to resemble pumpkins by using fine pieces of green pepper to mark the lines radiating from the stem. Crescents may be spread with deviled ham with a border of finely chopped ham to represent the new moon usually seen in conjunction with witches in flight.

Deviled Eggs. Deviled eggs are a suitable accompaniment to the sandwiches or one may arrange a Hallowe'en salad by marking eyes, nose and mouth on the rounded side of a peach, using two whole cloves with the heads for eyes, a large clove with the head down for the nose and stripe of pimento for the mouth.

Of course, there should also be pumpkin pie, for pumpkin is traditional of the harvest, as are also nuts and apples. Devil's food cake also is symbolic and such a feast seems quite incomplete without doughnuts and cider.

Place Cards. Crustal place cards may be made in this way: On a flat orange cream mint with a hole in the center (the kind that comes in packages), using frosting to hold the smaller mint in place. Place another hard round mint on top of the first and use a third for a handle to the candle holder thus made.

In the center, set a tiny orange or black candle (the kind used for birthday cakes). The effect is very attractive and a little name card may be attached to the handle.

Children's Party. For the children's party, round pieces of bread may be spread with a finely chopped raisin or date and nut filling. Then from other rounds of the same size, cut eyes, nose and mouth and place the cut pieces on top of the filling, which will show through the openings.

Cocoa may be given a Hallowe'en touch by floating marshmallow moons on top. These are made by painting faces on the marshmallows with a toothpick or fine brush dipped in chocolate.

With this cookies cut in witches, brooms and caps' new moons, pumpkins, apples and cats, may be served and some of these may be lightly frosted and decorated if one cares to carry the traditional motifs further. Instead of cider, serve tall glasses of orange juice.

Hallowe'en Games. Bobbing for apples is a time-honored Hallowe'en game, but since this usually means too much splash, the idea may be carried out by having the apples suspended from the ceiling on strings and have each person try to take a bite out of an apple. The one taking the largest bite wins the prize.

Or, apples may be pared and the parings allowed to fall (on heavy wrapping paper) on the floor to show the initial of one's future partner.

With everyone in the spirit of the evening let fun reign. Pass slips of paper, each containing the name of a popular song. The hostess conducts the "sing" with a baton, and each person starts to sing the chorus of his song. Those who laugh or fail to know the words, must step out of the crowd and sit down to listen.

Hallowe'en Super Menu. Prosen cheese salad. Pigs in blanket. Baking powder biscuit. Gingerbread with apple sauce and whipped cream. Coffee.

COPS HERE PLAN HARD JOLTS FOR TAXI BOOTICIANS

The state police today planned to take drastic action against the Checker taxicabs operating in this city, following the arrest Saturday night of Leon Brown, a driver for the concern, for sale and possession of liquor. It was the second arrest in a week of a driver for the taxi concern. Brown is alleged to have sold two pints of moonshine to a police agent.

The state police served notice that they would confiscate the taxi used in the delivery, and that they further intended to ask the finance company to re-possess the other taxi operated by the company. They allege they have received a number of complaints relative to the alleged illicit liquor operations of the company.

Charges of possession of liquor, will also be filed by the state police against Buck Keaton, arrested Saturday night. The state police allege that Keaton is a persistent offender and heretofore has always forfeited his $10 cash bail, given at the time of his arrest for his appearance in court.

Leon Brown, 20, driver of the Checker taxicab company, who took the place of Harold Porter, another driver of the company, when last Monday the latter was fined $100 and sentenced to three months in jail, was himself given the same sentence in Judge Taylor's court this morning on the charge of possession of two pints of moonshine.

The testimony showed that State Policeman O'Brien Saturday night ordered by phone two pints from Brown, which was delivered by him in his taxicab. Brown testified that he sold the booze at $2 a pint, of which $1.50 was to be turned over to the man from whom he got it. However, he refused to reveal the identity of the man who furnished him the moonshine.
