

GOOD COOKING DUE TO TRAINING SAYS CLASS INSTRUCTOR

"Good cooks are made, not born," says Miss Heath, expert home economist, who comes to Medford on March 29, 30, 31 and April 1, to present her famous series of culinary lectures—"The Kitchen Chautauqua."

"I have yet to find a woman who cannot prepare a tasty meal when inspired by a real appreciation of her true culinary responsibility," Miss Heath continues.

"The fact that some women are possessed of more imagination than others in the development of recipes of their own making is very true; but if a woman will take a little care to develop her ingenuity and consider cooking as an adventurous experiment and problem, instead of as a mere workaday task, every woman is bound to be an excellent cook."

Miss Heath declares that one of her greatest enjoyments in her cooking school work with the famous "Kitchen Chautauqua" is that of hearing many original recipes from women attending the schools and then testing them.

She says that she has stumbled upon a great number of recipes which she has later worked into her cookery programs very successfully.

Miss Heath respectfully requests that all housewives attending the Kitchen Chautauqua here on March 29, 30, 31 and April 1, bring just as many of their own favorite recipes as possible. She will be glad to discuss them with her audience and to try them afterward.

One thing which a large number of observers of cooking practices find to be true, is that the American housewife is now casting about on her own initiative for new ideas in cooking. She no longer follows grandmother's lemon pie recipe and Aunt Emma's chocolate cake recipe exactly and word-for-word, but varies the time-honored methods to see if she can't work out some better ones.

Until recent years, the principles of cookery were handed down from mother to daughter, and the inherited ideas often went along with the virtues. Very often Mother had excellent success in making chocolate cream pie, but had many shortcomings when it came to making anything else.

In these days, Miss Heath finds, daughters are eager to secure the latest information on every variety of home economics problems and to enlarge their recipe books on every variety of dish.

This newspaper expects Miss Heath will do a large share in making "good cooks" on her visit here. The time is fast approaching, and we urge that you make definite plans right now to attend.

The Kitchen Chautauqua will not be a dull, routine mass of information about times and temperatures—not a minute of it. It will bristle

Hoboes Shed Flannels; Answer Call of Spring

By Eva Nealon

They're shedding their red flannels and hanging them on the willows, in a branch of Medford's little hobo jungle on Bear creek, north of Jackson. Two flaming legs were seen there yesterday, swaying in the early spring breeze, while a gray-haired, whiskered "bundle stiff" fastened the sleeves to the budding tree. Beneath him others of his clan leaned over the muddy banks to continue with their "wash."

They are on the go again—for spring has come to the road.

When February 25 rolls "round," the "migratory workers," as James Gill defines them, "continue their search for something."

In his shoe repair shop on South Riverside yesterday, he voiced a strong objection to the public to the men, who travel, free. Men beside whom he has slept in California, Tennessee, British Columbia and way points with only the stars for covers.

"A hobo is not a bum," he explained, with a far away look in his eyes. "A bum doesn't work. A hobo does, he's as necessary as any other man to the production of crops in this country. He's just looking for something he never finds."

"Why does he go? Just to be going," the cobbler's look expressed thoughts far removed from mended shoes. "It's in the blood I guess, you've heard of the wanderlust. I've tried to settle down of late, but I don't know if I will. I've been here 12 months now." He turned to survey the shop, where shoes stood in even rows, undisturbed upon the shelf. On the counter in front of him were several sheets of paper, filled with lines of poetry. He continued to scribble with his pen.

"Yes, I'm from England. One out of nine to leave home. I started from Lancaster when I was 16. Bought a round trip ticket that time. Got a job, worked half a day, and quit. I had money in my pocket and felt independent."

"Twenty-two years ago I came to

with all sorts of thrilling, splotchy, new short-cuts to easier and simpler cooking. This easier and simpler cooking will give you better meals in the long run, because it stresses the ingenuity in which you may prepare your meals at half the time and at half the work grandmother did.

NEW QUARANTINE DEPOT NEAR HILT READY IN APRIL

"The new state quarantine station, which has been under construction just south of the intersection of the Hilt road with the Pacific highway, is several months away from being ready for occupancy," says the Skagitou Daily News.

"Installation of a water system is now in progress, and will soon be completed. Grading the grounds around the building and surfacing the drives will be completed shortly after the first of April, and the new station put in service between the 1st and 15th of April.

"The new station will be modern in all particulars. Electric lines will furnish lights.

"The new station is so constructed that stages and trucks may be driven under the building for inspection during wet weather, a separate drive being used for these. Passenger cars will be taken care of in a more adequate manner in the new station."

ACTIVIANS HEAR SALES TAX PLEA

At the Tuesday night meeting of the Active club, J. C. Barnes, prominent local realtor, discussed sales taxes and reduction of taxes on homes. He urged that future legislation be enacted in favor of the average home owner.

It was pointed out that a small tax placed on commodities would distribute the burden of county, state, and school taxes evenly among the people, and place less of a premium on home-owning.

Pins emblematic of their services were presented to past officers of the club. Past Presidents Keith Fennell and John Niedermeyer, and Past Secretaries Harold Larsen and Leslie Van Doren, received the pins.

Vocal solos were given by Earl McCormick, accompanied at the piano by Darrell Huson.

Francis Barr was a visitor, the guest of Frank VanDyke.
