Ye Smudge Pot
 By Arthur Perry
 It is the consensus of opinion, there has been enough of professional and amateur scandal-mongering heresabouts, ere the havoc and the habit become confirmed and chronic. The time has come to hoard gossip and quest for attempts at cheap sensationalism for votes.
 She was just temperamental—90 per cent temper and 10 per cent mental.—(Florida Times-Union). The complete and correct summation.
 Spring tripped into the valley Sunday. It will trip over something the end of the week, and spill all the Easter bonnets.
 SPEAKING OF EXTREMES
 (Grants Pass Courier)
 Redwood Highway grange held an interesting session at the fair grounds Friday night, with taxes, Irish jokes and skits making up the program. Roll call was taken by all telling an Irish joke and some of them were what one would expect. On the tax question Roscoe Howard gave a very interesting and instructive talk on "Tax reduction as a means toward economic recovery."
 "A prison term of six years for spreading false information and rumors, was inflicted. The court in passing sentence admonished the defendant: "To curb his tongue and not start reports of a prison break, during his term of servitude."—Press Dispatch.—By way of good and timely advice.
 The daffodil has outstripped the pussywillow, as something to stick in a vase.
 Sidney Smith was brought to the general hospital in Yreka Friday where he will be treated.—(Western Sentinel). From taste of some of the stuff, this is a wise precaution and excellent judgment, and there should be more of it.
 "Make your writing striking and musical, if you can. Don't try for onomatopoeia."—(Editor and Publisher).—By goah! That's what ails us!
 How many mothers realize their daughters are running around campuses, with their finger nails painted red and green, to be "modern."
 Another service station is digging a hole in its backyard for a bigger and better gasoline tank. This is not due to the continued sales of gasoline, which have not diminished during the economic stress, but to cut down on evaporation.
 Up-state exchanges and the county correspondence indicate the home talent play has started to get in its deadly work.
 TRAGEDY
 (Variety)
 An eastern daily has been offering $15 prizes for news tips for some time. Last week it had a call from a fellow who had been out of work for more than a year. He didn't have a news lead but he was willing to swim a river during sub-zero weather, giving the paper a picture and a story if it would turn over the coat of the regular news tip.
 Paper sent a photographer and reporter down to the wharf. They got a picture just before he dove, but the jobless boy never came up to claim his $15.
 The prize alibi of the year are produced by letter writers to the Oregonian, who defend the Oregon congressman, who votes dry and drinks wet. It is not the hypocrisy of the congressman on prohibition, but his habit, that makes him act the way he does.
 There has been a decline in the pesantry coming to town to raze the administration.
 The crowd was thicker than candidates for sheriff at another candidates' meeting.
 French Banker Fears Gold.
 PARIS.—(A)—Pierre Quesnay, general manager of the Bank for International Settlements at Basel, says that unless France begins to lend generously abroad she is likely to find her coffers over-filled with gold, the influx of which probably will continue for some time.

"Business as Usual"

DURING the war there was a popular slogan "business as usual." There is virtually a state of war in this country today. Only instead of fighting foreigners abroad, we are fighting Old Man Depression at home. Nothing would help more in this struggle, than to adopt that same slogan and act upon it. Not that business as usual is literally possible. Nor was it possible during the war. But the attitude of mind it represents,—the refusal to listen to the quitters and calamity howlers, to keep cool, and tend to business as far as POSSIBLE in the normal way—will do more to bring that about, than anything else.

Two Wars

ANOTHER war parallel might be drawn. One of the most striking features of the war, was the way various people reacted to it. The crisis so quickly separated the sheep from the goats, the true-blues from the yellow-streaks.

This economic war has acted in the same way, tearing the protective coloring from thousands, and revealing them in their true light.

IN BOTH cases the process has been a reassuring one, showing the American people AS A WHOLE to be sound, solid and dependable, willing to make personal sacrifices at any time, for the welfare of their country, capable not only of "giving it" but in the parlance of the prize ring, "taking it" as well.

The war involved tremendous sacrifices in blood and treasure. The economic war has also exacted a terrific toll, largely in treasure, but it has its casualty list as well.

AMERICA emerged from the war stronger than ever before, justly proud of the national spirit it had displayed. America will emerge from this economic war, in the same way.

No war medals will be distributed. But, when it is all over, countless individuals will be justly proud, that when things looked darkest, they stuck by their guns, and showed they had the "stuff" of which not only heroes, but GOOD CITIZENS are made.

The Man Who Failed

WHILE on this subject a recent incident might be cited. The writer met an old friend of a few weeks ago, who has been practically wiped out by the depression.

Naturally he felt very sorry for himself, and naturally also one felt very sorry for him. It was a tough break—a disaster for which he was not to blame,—and yet no one could deny such an outcome represented the fortunes of war,—which the "good soldier" forgets and fights on.

The interesting feature of his reaction, however, was its bitterness. He railed against the government, and maintained our democratic system had failed. He declared the Russian communists have the right idea, and he was for them tooth and nail.

WE HAVE no quarrel with a person who AFTER THINKING THINGS OUT honestly believes, the democratic idea is wrong, and the dictatorship of the proletariat, right. This is a free country. Every man is entitled to his opinion.

But this conclusion wasn't the result of thought. It was entirely the result of self-pity and rage.

And knowing the man we knew it wasn't an honest opinion. It was merely a passing phase, from which as soon as conditions improve, he will recover. Having taken a rap he wanted to pass them around; having been the victim of a system, he wasn't interested in improving that system, he merely wanted to tear it down.

In other words this friend demonstrated that when the crisis came he couldn't stand the gaff. Probably only those who have suffered a similar fate and not complained, have the right to criticize him.

Nevertheless, we are quite certain, that when Mr. Blank comes back—as a man of his ability and energy and years SHOULD—he will, we believe, be rather ashamed of the fit he threw, back in the year of Our Lord, Nineteen Hundred and Thirty-two.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., March 21.—You cannot say any place that it is the most beautiful in America, but you can say truly that there is no more beautiful place than this in America, or anywhere.

A long park runs along the edge of the ocean, and beyond it a beach with thousands bathing in the warm ocean. The timid northern eye, once alarmed by moderate loose flappy one-piece bathing suits, "stands at gaze," as Henry James might say contemplating copper-bronze and mahogany-hued ladies on their way to and from the water.

Their nonchalance, the lowness achieved in the back and the height in the front, the gracefully hopping figures, all actinic-tinted skin except for a wisp of material, strictly at the equator, fill you with new admiration for female courage when you have seen ladies with frilled ankles and wrists bathing at Ocean Grove, and live to see you feel that nature has exhausted her surprises. Or, has she?

Certainly, no one can say now that marriage is a leap in the dark.
 This wonderful Miami beach city, not to be described, bewilders you at first sight. Great lagoons, canals, magnificent private houses and hotels, bridges and causeways, three miles long, connecting with the mainland city, tens of thousands of palm trees, with dangling coconuts, bananas growing in backyards, dazzling sunshine flooding everything, and a cool breeze blowing from the ocean. You look, and understand the young man who asked the wonderful girl "Where have you been all my life?"

When you come here for the first time, and you will come, being intelligent, you will wonder why it took you so long to arrive and how your nation could own such a winter sun parlor, and you knowing it only by hearsay.

Venice, compared with this, is like an English sparrow compared with two birds of paradise and an ostrich, and as for the French Riviera, it is only a feeble imitation, whether you consider the brilliant sky, the blue water, the flowers or the groves of fruit trees.
 Flowering vines and bushes here grow over the tops of houses, and bear, literally millions of big flowers. When you plant anything, you immediately buy a long ladder, so you can keep it cut back within your reach.

When Charles Dillingham took his colored valet to gaze upon San Francisco's golden gate, he said to him "Now, Charles, you are looking at the Pacific ocean, that reaches all the way over to China. It is much bigger than the Atlantic ocean, and to which you are accustomed."
 Charles replied, "Yes, sir, I see it."

You look, but do not really see all, or one-tenth of what is before you. Years of work, by Florida's citizens, endless millions of dollars have built this marvelous city, from the great harbor to the many canals leading inland, and from this magnificent beach city to the skyscrapers that rise toward the blue sky, on the mainland. Men have lost millions here, and so they have done in every other place, ultimately making up all their losses. From now on, men will MAKE millions here. This is not advice to buy, Heaven forbid that. But the water and gas are all squeezed out, and the solid growth and establishment of permanent values will proceed from now on.

Luckily, Americans never really retire. They die, or go on working, unless they are imitations. To that fact, Florida and the whole country owe this Miami Beach.
 Carl Fisher, having grown very rich while young, decided to enjoy life, and since here long ago to retire, in the sunshine. He has been working like a slave ever since.
 A white-haired man told Fisher, "I am trying to build a wooden road to that strip of beach, out yonder. My money has given out, and I don't know how I'll ever finish. I need that road to get my truck from farms and groves over on the beach." "How old are you?" asked Fisher. "Seventy," replied the man. John Collins, once a resident of New Jersey, "Well," said Fisher, "if you are starting something new at that age, I'll start with you."
 Fisher built the three miles of causeway and bridge, of stone and

EXPLAINING THE GERMS
 Someone sends in a cult leader's pamphlet or magazine in which there appears an essay on "Colds," and in this essay a definition is offered. I've been baffled for years at the health authorities or physicians who issue public bulletins about "Colds" or "The Common Cold," in the vain effort to persuade these authorities to define "the common cold" if he really believes there is such an ailment or disease. No use. The wise ones refuse to commit themselves. Their position is satisfactory as it is: the general public knows what a "cold" is, of course, and probably thinks I'm daft when I pretend I don't.
 Well, this cult leader's definition is worthy enough, but pretty vague, after all. As a matter of fact, the essayist says, a cold is an inflammation. There you are. What more could anybody ask? Appendicitis is an inflammation, but we must not be too critical. The main thing here is to explain the germs, for according to this cult leader, there are a lot of germs mixed up with a cold. Oh, yes, indeed, vast quantities of germs, but the germs are scavengers that's all. Why, the cult leader goes on, it is a well known scientific fact that such germs are always present in the body.
 Which is all hokey. No scientific authority has shown that disease germs can be present in the tissues of the body without producing the specific disease of which they are the cause. Here the glib healing cult writer has stepped in over his depth. He has merely repeated in parrot fashion an old dodge which might serve very well in a debate between a couple of charlatans but can scarcely entertain anybody who knows pathology or bacteriology. The theory that all kinds of or any kind of disease germs may be present in the body in some circumstances yet not set up the specific disease has no foundation in fact.
 Another cult propagandist, delivering a lecture under the auspices of the local organization of his employers, made a similar crack about disease germs being merely scavengers which follow the disease, not the cause of the disease. This showman dally drew a laugh from his ignorant listeners. But if any of them had concrete and wood, dredged sand from the shallow waters making deep channels and incidentally created islands on which millions of dollars worth of real estate have been sold.

 Fisher built golf courses, a museum, an aquarium, a dozen hotels, polo fields, scores of houses, HE STARTED WORKING AND COULD NOT STOP. He built among other things a beautiful shaft, as a monument to Flagler, who built the railroads that bring people here. Miami, some day, will build a bigger monument to Carl Fisher—may that day be far away.
 Florida. Parked, in one block, you can see cars from Louisiana, Oklahoma, Missouri, New Jersey, Mississippi, New York, Massachusetts, Florida. Taxes gasoline seven cents a gallon, and travelers have the satisfaction of knowing that they are contributing to good roads that they use, and to public schools that turn out good citizens. You must see this state and city.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
The Torpid Liver.
 Is there any injurious effect from taking two or three grains of calomel once a month to prevent torpid liver?
 D. S. C.
Answer—It is not advisable. Belly breathing exercise and somersaults would be better for your liver. Send stamped envelope bearing your address and ask for instructions.
Saltpeper.
 Is there any danger in taking a small dose of saltpeper every day?
 Mrs. M. C.
Answer—No. Saltpeper is an ingredient of the urine used in preserving or corning meats, so those who eat such food take a small dose of saltpeper with each serving. But why take saltpeper, even if it does no harm?
Curvature of the Spine.
 Warner, has to stand on one foot most of the time, and is developing a curvature of the spine. Doctor says it ought to be corrected. Will this be serious in later years if not taken care of?—Mrs. S. A.
Answer—It is a serious enough now to demand proper medical care. If taken in time, perhaps suitable exercises under the supervision of the physician will correct the deformity.
Aunt, Auntie, Naughty.
 My aunt has been taking snuff for 10 years. She started it because of catarrh. What effect will it have if she keeps it up?—Mrs. M. J. T.
Answer—Not necessarily any ill effect. It is the same in effect as chewing or smoking.

Talks To Parents
BANKING ON A TALENT.
 By Alice Judson Peale.
 Miles always was known as the artist of the family. From the beginning his talent had been clear. At home even before he went to school he drew pictures well. Later at school his work stood out consistently as the best in each yearly exhibition.
 When other boys began preparing for college, Miles looked forward to art school. It never occurred to him or to any member of his family that he would become anything but an artist.
 But at art school Miles' work was no longer outstanding. It was merely pretty good. The imagination and originality that had characterized his work previously seemed to have deserted him.
 He began to realize that he would never be an artist. By the end of the first year he decided that unless his parents would now help him to get into college he would take the first job he could find anywhere.
 No matter how gifted a child may appear to be we cannot be sure how deep and rich is his endowment. A talent which seems to his parents and even to his teachers to be first rate, may yet not be so high grade as to warrant the limitation of his general education to develop it.
 There also is another reason for not banking upon a child's talent. A child will surely suffer from a profound sense of failure if, having been brought up to think himself something very near genius, he will finally face the fact that he is only mediocre.
 The greatest talent suffers nothing through all his round education. It does not need artificial encouragement or great doses of praise to come into its own. It needs only opportunity to develop in a sympathetic atmosphere.

When TEETHING makes HIM FUSSY
 One of the most important things you can do to make a teething baby comfortable is to see that little bowels do their work of carrying off waste matter promptly and regularly. For this nothing is better than Castoria, a pure vegetable preparation specially made for babies and children. Castoria acts so gently you can give it to young infants to relieve colic. It is equally effective for older children, too. Remember, Castoria contains no harsh drugs, no narcotics—it is absolutely harmless. When your baby is fretful with teething or a food upset, give a cleansing dose of Castoria. Be sure you get genuine Castoria with the name: Dr. H. H. Fletcher

Nervous Defendant Pleads Guilty Eve Jury Acquits Him
NEW YORK, March 22.—(AP)—Dan Nevins guessed wrong. He was on trial for first degree murder yesterday. The jury was deliberating. Conviction meant—the chair.
 Nevins grew more and more nervous. Finally he agreed to enter a plea of guilty to second degree manslaughter, and take a sentence of from five to ten years' imprisonment.
 While the formality of taking place, the jury, unaware of Nevins' action, finished its deliberations. The verdict, "Not guilty," however, was not accepted, in view of Nevins' plea.
