At the girls' League council luncheon given Monday at the senior high school, plans were made for the annual Girls' League Week and Leap Year Week, to be held April 4-9.

During this week the girls will sponsor teas and luncheons for mothers of League members, give programs, and hold dances.

On Monday, April 4, a council luncheon will be held and plans completed. A dinner open to council and committee members' mothers and lady faculty members will be held on Tuesday. The charge will be 50c a plate. Tables at the banquet will be decorated by the Girls' Pep club.

An assembly for the entire school is to be given Wednesday afternoon and all girls' activities, such as the Girls' Athletic association, Girls' Pep club and the Girls' Glee club will take part.

Thursday evening over the weekly high school broadcast, Joan Stehr, league president, will give a talk on what the league means to the girls.

The Hi-Times, which comes out on Friday, will be edited by Girls' League members and will contain numerous articles on their association and on the courses open to girls in the business world.

During Leap Year week the girls will perform the functions usually done by the boys, opening doors, allowing boys to precede them, etc. The standing committee for this is: Barbara Hauk, Barbara Fields, and Allen Latham.

On Friday afternoon, April 9, a program and style show, open only to girls, will be held, followed by tea in the home economics room. Friday evening the April frolic, a masquerade ball, will be given in the gym. Three cash prizes, not yet decided upon, will be given for the most unique costumes.

PRICE OF EXTRAS ADVANCES PENNY

PORTLAND, March 22.—(AP)—Advance of 1c in the price of extras in the cube trade on the produce exchange for the late season, appears the result of general betterment in the situation along the Pacific slope.

There was no change in general market conditions for eggs here during the day.

Late decline in chicken buying prices is continued generally in the local trade with increasing supplies offered from Washington points. This is the heaviest factor in the local trade.

SMITH TALKS ON SOUTH AMERICAN FINDINGS AT CLUB

Prof. Warren D. Smith, head of the geology department at the University of Oregon and president of the Eugene Rotary club, talked to local Rotarians today at luncheon at the Hotel Medford on the subject of South America.

The interest of the North Americans in South America he justified by the following reasons: First, "our four-and-a-half billion dollar investment in South America, much of which either has been or may be lost; second, "the difference in culture between North and South America;" and "third, the lessons in need to learn from the South Americans."

After explaining the great differences in the historical background of the two peoples, Prof. Smith went on to discuss the significance of the Pan-Latin movement, which cuts across this country's own Pan-Americanism.

Among the topics dealt upon was the interesting experiment in applied sociology carried on by La Prensa, the great Buenos Aires newspaper.

Professor Smith told the Rotarians about his visits to Rotary clubs in Valparaiso, Santiago, Buenos Aires and Uruguay, and of the things the Rotarians there were doing toward the betterment of their communities. He was in South America at the time of the recent revolution and visited six of the most important countries.

Rotarian W. F. Baird, pastor of the First Christian church, announced a special Easter service for men and boys to be held at the Rialto theatre next Sunday morning at 9:30, and invited all Rotarians to attend. Emil Mohr, well known member of the local club, was given a hearty welcome by his fellow Rotarians after a long absence on account of illness.

Visiting Rotarians at the session included Warren D. Smith, president of the Eugene Rotary club; K. H. Jaenicke of San Francisco, and J. C. Stevens and Carl Bruntz of Portland. Visitors included Delroy Getchell, John G. Mann, L. W. Donnelly, M. O. Schenck and Max Pierce.

BANK DEPOSITS PUT IN VAULTS FIRST NATIONAL

The action of the state bank heads in consummating the transfer of the funds and thereby making available for local business and circulation $750,000 in deposits that might have otherwise been idle for an indefinite period acted as a tonic on conditions. The move also averted a possible run, or application for receivership.

Airplane Brings Currency

An airplane with $1,000,000 in currency arrived Monday afternoon for distribution in Jackson county banks as a precautionary measure. The shipment came from Portland upon orders from the Federal Reserve bank of San Francisco. Arrival of the treasure was not known until it had been stored away in bank vaults.

Collapse of the Jackson County bank, established in 1888, was the cause of wide regret and was emphatically attributed to a "whispering campaign." The deposit withdrawal started early this year and drew their peak Friday and Saturday morning. Public opinion has already started to manifest an aversion to rumors and "talking on a wholesale basis."

May Probe "Whispers"

There is a federal and state law making circulation of false statements about the condition of a bank a felony with a heavy prison sentence as a penalty. No information upon any possible legal action against "whisperers" has been revealed by authorities. It is predicted it will be called to the attention of both state and federal grand juries at an early date for a probing.

No decision has been reached upon the disposition of the Jackson County bank building or its fixtures and equipment.

HALF A MILLION TOMATO PLANTS FOR VALLEY USE

Tomato plants numbering approximately half a million are being grown by three greenhouses for the Bagley Canning company according to W. A. Gates, a member of the board of directors for the cannery. Two greenhouses in Medford and one in Ashland are handling the plants previous to their distribution to the various growers in the valley. A special variety of plant is being raised by the nurserymen, the seeds being obtained for them by the cannery. At the present time the growers are transplanting the small plants, Mr. Gates said.

"Many people ask why the cannery is not operated on a year-around basis," Mr. Gates said, "but they do not seem to realize that it takes eight months of the year to handle the tomato crop."

G. E. Pierce's greenhouse here is now caring for 250,000 of the small plants, and at the present time has seven men employed. The young plants are being transplanted in order to make them sturdier, insuring a large crop for the growers. Mr. Gates pointed out.

In the latter part of April the tomatoes will be moved from the greenhouse to the various land tracts of the growers who hold contracts with the cannery.

"Because of the continual care necessary to the success of the tomatoes, a large number of Rogue river people are employed in getting the crop ready for the cannery," Mr. Gates said.

STRANGE SIGHTS PREVAIL IN PATH DIXIE TWISTERS

One of the heaviest tolls was taken in a stable on Main street in Northport, where six persons were killed after taking refuge there.

Many residents of Northport saw the twister coming and making a noise "like racing automobiles." It was black and moved slowly, they said, and at times seemed to stand still, then move on.

The Tuscaloosa Country club was wrecked and huge trees uprooted and strewn over the golf course like so many bushes. The clock in the club stopped at 4:01 p. m.

Two men among the injured at Clanton were carried to Thorsby, five miles away, for treatment, and just as they arrived there the twister doubled back, cutting a wide path through the town. They were spared on its second visit.

Wilbur, B. Lyon of Columbiana gave a vivid description of the tornado which struck there.

"Huge timbers 20 feet in the air told me it was a twister," he said. "It played with houses like they were match boxes."

Herbert L. Kindred, American Airways pilot, and his co-pilot, P. J. Hare, told of a harrowing experience in battling through 60-mile headwinds from Jackson, Miss., to Birmingham. Their ship passed over Northport a few minutes after the tornado struck.

Kindred said their big tri-motored plane was lurching so they were almost thrown from their seats. There were no passengers.

GREATER OREGON WOMEN MEETING

FRUIT WEIGHING SUIT MOVES SLOW

Little progress was made today in the civil suit of Fred C. Sanders, orchardist, against the Suncrest Orchards, and L. A. Banks for the collection of $1500 allegedly due on fruit sold to the Suncrest Orchards on contract. Sanders, his son Aubrey, and truck drivers who hauled and weighed the fruit were the principal witnesses this morning.

Sanders holds that he weighed the fruit at the Farmers' Exchange here, and that the receiver weighed it at his packing plant, and that there is an alleged discrepancy in the weight amounting to $1500.

It was expected that the case would be concluded today late or early tomorrow morning.

Sanders is represented by Attorney Frank DeSouza and Rawley, and the defendant by Attorney Gus Newbury.

W. A. GATES AND A REPRESENTATIVE OF THE SOLID DAIRY & PRODUCE CO. ARE SPEAKERS FOR THE AFTERNOON.

The aim of the program is to acquaint the women, who spend the greater portion of each southern Oregon dollar, to the use of home products. The campaign to be waged by the organization will acquaint them with the brands produced and packed in the Rogue River valley and Medford.

"Know Medford first" will be the slogan of the organization drive.
