western country, and a plan for doubling Russia's supply of cattle, pigs and sheep within a short time.

Seventeen million cattle are to be changed to thirty-four million cattle, and so with pigs and sheep as rapidly as nature can do the work.

Every farmer knows that it is not much of a task. Our own government made such experiments on a small scale, with one thousand reindeer placed in Alaska, changed suddenly to thirty thousand reindeer. But we do these things fancifully, and fitfully.

The Russian government proposes to produce enough beef, mutton and pork for every man, woman and child in Russia, and to see that the Russians get it, and eat it.

After twenty-three days of intensive search there is, unhappily, no news of the Lindbergh child. The state police of New Jersey report their financial resources depleted, the search more than the fifty thousand dollars that the kidnapers are supposed to have demanded. That however is completely unimportant.
