ELKS SPELLERS FIGHT TO DRAW

A bitter battle to the end, that Park Snow Films annual epic struggle, the Elka spelling bee, ended in a draw last night,

"enthusiastic" sent her down, follow-ed by Mrs. Carl Bowman, who was generous with "I's" in partial.

At this point Captain Hall charged stalling tactics in the Newbury ranks between Balph Kooser and Glenn Smith, but with his usual efficiency. Schoolmaster Getchell soon had peace Schoolmaster Getchell soon had peace restored. Jose Fliegel started out bravely on "stele" but falled. Smith high school principal, started equally as courageously on "sile" and forgot to mention the "a." Bert Thierolff

For years Louis Ulrich had known the orthography of "corps," but when it was given to him, he gave up without a struggle. Mrs. Glenn Smith fell by the wayside on the same one, while Phil Lounsberry, who used to be one of the champion bloycle riders of Medford, forgot the letters used in "pedal." Don Newbury, another Hall supporter, became puzsled on "stationary," and Dr. Goldsberry on "contagious."

on "contagious."
C. T. Baker falled to remember no C. T. Baker falled to remember his spelling rilles and took his seat when freective came his way. Cole Holmes, who had come through with colors figing on several difficult tests, added an "e" to "chaperon." Waiter Olmschied tried hard of "ambassador, but in his anxiety missed, George Relison did no better on "benefited," when he used too many "ts." G. G. Lemmon and Mrs. Waiter Rowley had diess on "parallel" but did not voice them properly.

Ralph Koozer had spent the evening before practicing on "eligible," but when he tried to spell it, down he went, followed by August Klocker, one of Newbury's anchor men, who

When it had begun to appear that Hamilton Patton would keep on going forever, along eame "marvelous." Walter Rowley tried "scaly" and failed, while Joe Marshall thought he could spell "parallelepipedom." He progressed no further than "para." Austin Frasier was one of the last three in the Newbury ranks. He made his fairewell bow on "paranoise." Victor Tengwald and E. C. Ferguson stood their ground after their capital falled on "collectible." "Fergie" kept on spelling until a catchword, "Paraffin," came his way. This left Gus Newbury and Ernest Rostel on the other side.

Other side.

Out came the word "foray" and Roatel spelled it f-o-r-a-y but did not know the schoolmaster was looking at another method or spelling the word as "forray." Either method was correct, the schoolmaster later stated, but Roatel weer, done but Rostel went down

Facing each other in combat array, Newbury and Tengwald were ready for the worst. It came with the 'ext word, "amerceable." Captain Newbury missed and when it came to Tengwald he missed as well, causing the big match to end in a draw. Last year Tengwald came through the match unscathed. In view of last night's spelling, he defended his champtoniship title well.

Schoolimater Getchell stated there was more good spelling in the encounter than he had heard for many years, stating further all the words years, stating further all the word years, saving further at the words out of an advanced spellingbook were exhausted and the dictionary was found necessary to bring the match to a close. He was especially proud of the group in spelling the entire list of catchwords he had prepared including such teasers as: racefied, naphths, kimono, picnteking, battalloit, liquety, sacrifegious, hiscont, chartrart, comensus, occurred, libelous, limned, recommend, collectible and paraffin. The last word, before It was missed by Perguson, had been spelled correctly once before during the evening

some of the matches in years gone by, especially one when Hall spelled "spinach" as "spinage, and Newbury spelled "garage" with a "J".
Following the spelling bee, refreshments were served and dancing was enjoyed, bringing to an end an evening filled with genuine entertainment and incidentally the last day of Ralph Koopers raign as exalted ruler, finishing one of the most successful years in the history of the lodge. He is being followed by Joe Fliegel as exalted ruler.

End Showing At

annual epic struggls, the Elks' spelling bee, ended in a draw last night, before a large gallery of spelling fans following she match, round by round. True to his trust as captain, Gus Newburry was the last to go down on his side, while Court Hall, leader of his hand-picked crew, remained almost to the finish, encountering bad weather in the word 'collectible,' and comling down in a forced landing.

The match was one of the most coderly in many years and at the same time revealed the spellers to be in the pink of condition, spelling words which in past years had proved simbling blocks. In their hasle to spell rapidly, however, contestants failed on words they had known since grammar school days. Hanks of the Newbury and Hall contingents were strengthed by the presence of several lady Elks, who withstood numerous barrages only to finally succumb.

Por a round of two there were no casualties until Raymond Reter of the Newburry forces forget there was an "e" on the end of "breathe," and with scholarly aplomb was motioned to his seat by Schoolmaster Delroy Getchell. It was not long until others followed him. One of the stars of the Hall apellers, Mrs. Joe Fliegel, stumbled on "awkward," leaving out the second "w."

John Niedermeyer had good intentions with the word "surgeon," but blurted out s-e-r-g-c-o-n. While Mrs. Hamilton Patton was one of the most enthusiastic supporters of Newbury, "enthusiastic supporters of Newbury serious sup
