SENATOR FREDERICK STEIWER

for the primary campaign because there is pending in congress vital legislation in which Oregon is deeply interested.

While the senator is on the job in Washington, his friends in Oregon will conduct his campaign, the temporary organization having been launched with T. Harry Bantfield as chairman and Will H. Masters, secretary.

Coincidentally with the filing of his candidacy here Senator Steiwer, from Washington, released the following statement:

"The first duty of government is restoration of confidence and stability in business, industry and agriculture. Conditions cannot be improved in Oregon until agriculture, livestock and the lumber industry are placed on a profitable basis. I have stood aggressively, and will continue to stand, for justice to these industries. I am working for improved credit facilities.

"I have supported and will continue to support, federal legislation authorizing public works to provide employment for idle men.

"I advocate immediate federal development of hydro-electric power on the Columbia river.

"I believe in the objects sought to be obtained by the 18th amendment. A large and interesting number of citizens demand that this amendment be referred to congress for consideration. As a consistent advocate of popular government I stand for the right of the people to vote on any question, and will not deny them the right to vote on this question.

"I propose to rid America of improper and harmful alien influences. Much of our economic and business trouble comes from abroad."

Mrs. Reames Returns

Mrs. A. E. Reames returned this morning from Portland and Tacoma, to which city she accompanied her mother, Mrs. Edward J. Lanning on her return from an extended visit in Medford. Mrs. Reames reports her mother's condition a little improved. The two encountered much stormy weather in the north, but Mrs. Reames enjoyed a several days' stay in Portland in spite of the discouraging weather, and attended the spring flower show of the Portland Flower and Garden club, held at the beautiful home of Mrs. A. E. Rockey. Saturday afternoon she also visited many gardens before returning south.

The early spring flowers and shrubs included in the show, she described this morning as quite the loveliest things she has seen. She recalled the message of Mr. DeGraff, German plant authority, speaker at the garden show and tea, who declared the narcissus of Oregon the most beautiful in the world.

The daffodils and all other members of the narcissus family, exhibited. Mrs. Reames said, carried proof of his statement in their exceptionally tall stems and large fluttering petals.

Shrubs from Portland's largest and most highly developed gardens represented some of the rarest species known to the world. Many bespoke Oriental ancestry and all displayed blooms of great perfection, but the wild flowers in the show did not compare in beauty with those of southern Oregon, Mrs. Reames stated.

PEEK DISCLOSES ROOMER DEAD IN LOCAL LODGINGS

Claude Bagley, transient, about 45 or 50 years old, was found dead this morning about 8:00 o'clock at the Washington rooms, 33 South Front street, having apparently suffered a heart attack during the night, according to Deputy Coroner Joy Walker.

An examination will be made today to determine the exact cause of death, Mr. Walker said.

A letter dated March 9, from John L. Pearson of Shelton, Wash., was found in the man's pocket, addressed to Claude Bagley at Olympia, Wash. Information in the note indicated Pearson was a friend of Bagley's.

The coroner's office has telegraphed Pearson for information concerning any relatives of Bagley.

Jessie Hopkins, manager of the rooming house, said that Bagley came there about 8:30 o'clock last evening and faltered several times trying to climb the stairs. She said that after he had paused after each step, she went down and helped him to the top.

He registered as C. Bagley, giving no address, and paid for his room. Mrs. Hopkins helped him to the room, and a few minutes later he asked her if there was some place near where he might obtain food. She told him there was a restaurant down stairs, and he returned from there in about a half hour, Mrs. Hopkins said.

Bagley called Paul Reynolds, another roomer at the house, and asked him to help him off with his coat, having said earlier in the evening that he was "in a terrible shape."

Two or three of the roomers remarked this morning that they had heard someone coughing and choking between 11:30 and 12 o'clock last night, and wondered who it could have been.

About eight o'clock they looked through the transom of Bagley's room. Mrs. Hopkins said, and saw him lying there, dead. City police and the coroner's office took charge of the case.

Bagley was reasonably well dressed, according to the officers, and had a small amount of money in his pocket. He carried his clothes in a sack.

TOOTHACHE ENDS OPERATIC STAR'S STAY IN MEDFORD

"I've known the Stevens for years. I sang with Jim back in the good old days of comic opera. In the Bohemian Girl, Robin Hood and hosts of others. And if I didn't have this diabolical tooth, I wouldn't be leaving for San Francisco tonight." The lovely blonde person, seated on a bench in the Southern Pacific depot, clasped her jaw with a pained gesture, which, contradicted all popular advertisements and revealed that actresses, too, have toothache.

"There were so many lovely parties planned," she complained, opening wider her deep-set eyes, which expressed distance and friendliness almost simultaneously with the flash of her dark lashes.

Turning to Mr. and Mrs. James Stevens, she added: "I've had a grand time. Everyone has been so good to me, so many dinners, and all the time I've had the toothache. And what can you do when you have the toothache? Well, I'm going to do it, go to San Francisco and hibernate until our act opens in the Golden Gate theater Friday."

Finally and dignified intermingled in her tones.

The train whistled down the tracks and the group moved from the depot. "When did I last see the Stevens?" When I left New York before coming west with Dr. Rockwell's act. They were the last people I saw there and the first I saw here.

"The stage game? It is practically nothing at all, of course," she managed an answer to another question. "But it is getting better, I believe. Vanderville is the only chance right now. That's what we are doing. It was getting better when we left New York, at least."

Grasping the Stevens by the arms, the tall blonde woman, introduced as "Bernice Merston of Dr. Rockwell's act," moved toward the waiting train. Her form and face gave no hint of years, that in keeping with the ads, but the pained admission of an aching tooth flashed across her countenance again, as she boarded the Shasta, four days in advance of schedule.

FIND ALL-BRAN HAS TWICE THE USABLE IRON IN LIVER

Also Furnishes "Bulk" and Vitamin B to Overcome Common Constipation

Liver is known as a good source of iron for the blood. Now, new tests show Kellogg's ALL-BRAN contains twice as much blood-building iron as an equal amount by weight of beef liver.

But more important still, laboratory experiments show ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and Vitamin B to tone the intestinal tract.

This means Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is a fine way to overcome constipation—with the headaches, loss of appetite and energy that so frequently result.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that of lettuce. Inside the body, it absorbs moisture, forming a soft mass, which gently clears the intestines of wastes. Special cooking processes make ALL-BRAN finer, milder, more palatable.

How much better than raking pills and drugs—so often habit-forming. Just eat two tablespoons of ALL-BRAN daily for most types of constipation. It is not habit-forming. If your intestinal trouble is not relieved this way, see your doctor.
