ELKS' SPELLERS CHALLENGED BY I.O.O.F. EXPERTS

The spelling title, held with pride by members of the Elks' lodge down through the years, is contested today for the first time in history, and Gus Newbury and Court Hall will be forced to carry the competition outside their own ranks to prove their supremacy.

The right of the Elks to claim the orthography laurels of Medford is questioned by members of the I. O. O. F., whose challenge was accepted last night by the B. P. O. E. Exalted Ruler Joe Fliegel, who accepted the challenge for a match, appointed Messrs. Newbury, Hall and Lewis Ulrich as committee to meet with the Odd Fellows to complete details for the contest.

W. F. Rector and his committee, as yet unnamed, will represent the Odd Fellows at the session to be held Tuesday. At that time arrangements for the spelling bee which the Odd Fellows predict will mark the "Elks' undoing," will be completed.

As leading aspirants to the title, so long claimed by Newbury and Hall, Mr. Rector names Prof. A. J. Hanby, H. W. Conger and A. B. Williams. He has many others whose qualifications and training he refuses to reveal, but boasts that they can outspell any "has-been school teacher" in the county.

The best spellers from both lodges are expected to enter the contest and the committees have been advised to obtain a hall large enough to house a record southern Oregon crowd for the occasion.

All lodge members, spellers and their families, former pupils of Hall and Newbury, who glory in the prospects of their defeat and supporters of the cry for bigger and better spellers, are expected to form the throng of spectators.

Date of the bee will be announced immediately after the meeting of the committees and the public is promised only short glimpses of Newbury, Hall and their leading competitor, Vic Tengwald and August Klockner, during the interim to follow.

Seek Swin Title

Washington Athletic club of Seattle believes it has a championship 400-yard swimming relay team in (top to bottom) Helene Madison, Edna McKibbin, Patricia Linton and Olive McKean. They're going after the Olympic title.

What the Girl Scouts Are Doing

The first Girl Scouts of southern Oregon to receive their Golden Eagle badge will be presented at the Girl Scout court of awards on Saturday night at the court house. These girls are Katherine Stearns and Madge Kunzman from the high school troop who have been Girl Scouts since organization of the first troop in Medford.

The badge presentation will be made by C. E. Gates at the close of the regular presentation of all other badges and awards, and the girls will be introduced by their captain, Miss Clita Walden.

CLUB WOMEN IN HOT DEBATE ON PROHI QUESTION

SALEM, April 8.—(AP)—The prohibition question almost disrupted the third district convention of Federated Women's clubs, held here yesterday. A resolution affirming the convention's stand in favor of the 18th amendment was finally referred to the legislative committee to be presented at the state federation convention at Portland in May.

Officers elected unanimously for the ensuing two-year term were Mrs. Clara B. Smith of Metzger, president; Mrs. A. E. Austin of Woodburn, second vice-president; Mrs. William M. Hartford, Portland, treasurer; Mrs. Saldie Orr Dunbar, Portland, director. Mrs. W. F. Fargo, Salem, is the retiring president.

More than 200 women, representing 40 of the 65 clubs in the district federation, attended the convention. The 1933 session will be held at St. Helens.
