Mrs. Miles Gives Paper on Roumania Before Study Club

Mrs. R. B. Hammond presented the paper for the afternoon at the meeting of the Wednesday Study Club, held during the past week at the city library, with Mrs. T. W. Miles, president, presiding. The subject of her paper was "Roumania: Its Population and Resources." And the content brought to the members the following information:

Roumania, like all the other countries of central Europe are very important to the whole civilized world, as they contribute a bridge between Europe and Asia. Roumania is rich in minerals and marble quarries are of the finest for building materials. Three-fourths of the people are farmers, and until the five-year plan of Russia began operations they were the granary of Europe. The Roumanians have always been very cruel to the Jews, although they have been somewhat dependent on them for money. In 1902 John Hayes of the United States protested their treatment of them and in 1919 both the peasant and Jew were allowed to vote in the public elections. In 1908 a German prince was brought to Roumania as high as from the prince, and in 1881 he was crowned king of Roumania. During his reign industries were instituted and greater land holdings and larger sums of money were paid to the crown, until he became the richest monarch in Europe. In 1919 the land was divided and the poorer classes were allowed to own it, but the farming is done by the individual owner and no co-operative methods are being used and much of the production is unwisely marketed. At the close of the world war Roumania had acquired twice her territory and had three times her former population. They are one of the richest countries in the world yet they are still the poorest, and they have borrowed millions each year to finance the government, paying as high as from the prince, and interest. France is their ally, and French and English are leading languages of the court. The rulers of Roumania have never loved the people or its language or cared for her success only as it benefited them financially. King Ferdinand, being ill and indifferent to the affairs of his kingdom, his queen, Marie, and the prime minister took full control of the government's affairs. There is much intrigue at the court of Roumania as there ever was at that of Peter the Great. Queen Marie and her son, the crown prince, Carol, never agreed and there never has been any sympathy between them, as Carol is of the Liberalist party. A Feminist party is now being formed with hope to govern the seventeen millions of Roumania's population.

Mrs. A. J. Hanby gave a book review of George Horton's "Home of Nymphs and Vampires." The Isles of Greece are at once a peacock of natural beauty, shrines of ancient glory, and haunts of classic myths and modern folk lore. As the reader visits one and then another in the varied pages of this book, he finds his guide wise in all their impressions of the country, full of sympathy with their rich history, and deeply interested in their present aspects and problems. For George Horton is a citizen of both the ancient and modern world. This is an intensely interesting book, well worth re-reading for its beauty of language and historical value.

The next club meeting will be April 20, Mrs. J. R. Crews giving the history of Italy before Mussolini and today.

Book review, Italy of the Italians, by Mrs. C. W. James. Current events, Mrs. N. T. Hodges.
