HISTORY FULFILLS EDDY PREDICTIONS AVERS LECTURER

The following lecture on Christian Science, entitled "Christian Science; Its Logical Interpretation of Scripture," was given last evening at the Rialto theater by William Duncan Kilpatrick, C.S.B., of Detroit, Mich., member of tre board of lectureship of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.:

In her various works on the subject, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, Mary Baker Eddy, has included many wide and far-reaching predictions. History has proved and is constantly proving not only the verity of these predictions but the further fact that they evidenced a keen spiritual faculty, vision, and foresight. In her book entitled "Pulpit and Press" (p.22) Mrs. Eddy makes this statement: "If the lives of Christian Scientists attest their fidelity to Truth,' I predict that in the twentieth century every Christian church in our land, and a few in far-off lands, will approximate the understanding of Christian Science sufficiently to heal the sick in his name. Christ will give to Christianity his new name, and Christendom will be classified as Christian Scientists."

This prediction was made relatively a short time ago. Very recently, according to reports appearing in the press of the country, one of the large Protestant church denominations in the United States, at its regular, general convention, was presented with a report submitted by a joint committee composed of bishops and deputies of that organization, after six years of careful study and investigation on the part of the committee, which report finds as follows:

1. "That Christian healing has passed beyond the stage of experiment and its value cannot be questioned.

2. "That throughout the world spiritual healing is no longer the hope of a few, but the belief and practice of a large and rapidly increasing number of persons.

3. "That such healing is an experience of mankind that can no longer be questioned.

4. "That while faith in any supposed remedy produces some effect, vital faith in God, as revealed in Christ, is followed by results which are more sure, more lasting, and of a more evidently spiritual character."

That report was signed and submitted not only by bishops and deputies of the church but by some of the leading physicians and surgeons of the United States.

God

The foundation of the entire revelation which Mrs. Eddy has given to humanity in Christian Science is the clear concept of God and man which she gained through her ceaseless and prayerful search of the Scriptures. Therefore, it is to the Scriptures we all must go if we would know the true God revealed in Christian Science. By way of deduction let us see if we cannot come to a clear concept of God. In the first chapter of Genesis we rea dthis: "And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness; and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth. So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; . . . and God saw every thing that he made, and, behold, it was very good." Here we find man a perfect image of God, pure, holy, spiritual and upright.

Now, turning to the very next chapter of Genesis, just six verses farther along in the Bible, we read this: "But there went up a mist from the earth, . . . and the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul." Here we have a second account of the creation of man diametrically opposed to the first account in the first chapter of Genesis just six short verses removed. Then going on a little farther, the third chapter of Genesis has this to say about this man made from the dust of the ground, this man who goes by the name of Adam, this man of flesh and blood and bones: "And unto Adam he (the Lord God) said . . . cursed is the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life; thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth to thee; . . . in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken; for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return."

Now there must be something wrong somewhere. What do you suppose has become of the dominion, the power, the goodness, the purity, and the holiness with which God endowed man only a few verses back, before the mist arose? Here we have clearly two distinct and opposing statements about man. One is that man is good, pure, holy and spiritual, has dominion over everything, is created of God, and is like God. The other is that he is a helpless, defenseless, powerless creature, made of plain everyday dust from no particular pattern whatever. The only thing in the Bible that separates these two differing accounts of man's creation is the "mist." No mention is made of the man created in the image and likeness of God as having sinned and fallen, or as having been changed in any way. There comes the mist, and then comes the account of the creation of man as about the most helpless and miserable creature one could imagine.

You will remember that we started out to ascertain what is the true nature of God. Now comes the question: Which one of these two creations, or men, described in the Bible as having been created by God, is like God? Both cannot be; that is certain. If we can determine which one of these two men is like God we can determine what God is like. The Bible from beginning to end is replete with answers to this query. Isaiah, for instance, having knowledge, evidently, of this account of creation which depicts man as made from dust and as having the breath of life breathed into his nostrils, writes, "Cease ye from man, whose breath is in his nostrils; for wherein is he to be accounted of?" Job, commenting on this same man, his Adam man, this man of the dust and of the ground, says: "Man that is born of woman is of few days, and full of trouble. He cometh forth like a flower, and is cut down; he fleeth also as a shadow, and continueth not. . . . For there is hope of a tree, if it be cut down, that it will sprout again, and that the tender branch thereof will not cease. . . . But man dieth, and wasteth away." Jesus said, "The fleah (that is, the material man) profiteth nothing." We are not, then, left long in doubt as to what the writers in the Bible think about this dust man,—this man of flesh and blood and bones—this Adam man.

Of the man described in the first chapter of Genesis, made in the image and likeness of God and having dominion over all the earth, the Psalmist wrote: "For thou hast made him a little lower than the angels, and hast crowned him with glory and honor. Thou madest him to have dominion over the works of thy hands; thou hast put all things under his feet." Some difference here between the man made in the image and likeness of God and the man made of the dust of the ground, who is depicted as a miserable, groveling, helpless creature! If we are to put any confidence at all in the Bible we are bound to the conclusion that this man of flesh and blood and bones, this Adam man, is not the man of God's creating, and that, therefore, mortal, material, man does noe represent God. We are bound to the further conclusion that the man spoken of in the first chapter of Genesis, who is depicted as good and as having dominion over all the earth, is like God. So, if we have done nothing else from this course of reasoning, we have found that God is in no wise similar to that which you and I have been wont to call material man. And thus, by the process of elimination, we have abolished completely any sense of God as a humanly circumscribed personality.

Now, to face about in our reasoning: Jesus described God as Spirit, which, of course, has nothing to do in any way with what may be termed matter or the physical. Spirit signifies infinite, filling all space, ever present, everywhere, here and now. Jesus also referred to God as good; not as a good God, but as good itself. Goodness is what? Mental, of course. Goodness is not and never can be a quality of matter. It must be mental. St. Paul refers, on several occasions, to the "mind of the Lord," or the "mind . . . which was also in Christ Jesus," pointing out that the animating Principle or Good of Jesus the Christ was Mind, and that this Mind is the true God. St. John tells us that God ist Love. To be exact, St. John says: "Every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God. He that loveth and not knoweth God; for God is love." What is love? It is mental, is it not? It is something expressed in thought. Thus we see that the Bible leaves no room for doubt as to what God is and His exact nature.

Now, there is no equivocation whatever about Jesus' statement that God is Spirit. No one could misunderstand that. There is no question whatever about St. John's statement that God is Love. No one would deny that love is something expressed in thought, word, and deed. If, therefore, God is something expressed in the consciousness of man, is it not clear that the God of man must also be the Mind of man? And if this conclusion is a logical one then is not clear that man, the image and likeness of God, which the Book of Genesis describes as good and as having dominion over all the earth, is mental or spiritual, not physical?

Hot Shot for Mellon

As you know," Governor Murray said, "we have just got rid of a secretary of the treasury under whom three presidents have served. It's about time we got a president to serve over the secretary of the treasury."

Governor Murray absolutely refused to discuss the sudden termination of his speaking tour in Oregon.

"That is one thing I will not discuss," said the governor. "I have nothing to say about it now."

Later he was again questioned about the speaking tour and, showing some little ire, declared that the question had been asked before and he had given his answer. He declined to comment upon possible conditions in Oklahoma City which might have some bearing on his sudden decision to return there.

"Naturally I would go home, wouldn't I?" was the extent of his comment.

DAIRYMEN TO MEET AT C. POINT TONIGHT

Members of the Rogue River Valley Dairymen's association will conduct their regular monthly meeting at the grange hall in Central Point this evening at 8 o'clock, it has been announced.

John Anderson of Central Point is president of the organization, and dairymen from points throughout Jackson county and part of Josephine county are expected to attend.

ASK 'GREENHORNS' KEEP AWAY FROM DEAD INDIAN HUNT

Search for the bodies of Edwin C. Brown and his wife, who lost their lives in a blizzard that roared through the Dead Indian district January 11, last, continues. Two forest rangers, stationed in that section during the summer, joined the hunt Monday. They are expected to return to the city tomorrow. If the middle-aged homesteader and his mate wandered far in their efforts to find their own cabin it may be weeks before the final chapter in the tragedy is written.

William Taylor, one of the leaders in the search and a neighbor of the Browns, through the sheriff's office has requested "that all greenhorns stay away from the district" on the grounds they are apt to get lost themselves and start new searching posses. According to Taylor, "the country all looks alike now with snow on the ground, and it's no trick to get lost."

A group of young people started to invade the area last Saturday but were turned back by residents who warned them of the dangers.

EAGLE PT. ASKS COATING OF OIL FOR MAIN ROAD

A petition, signed by practically all the business men and residents of the Eagle Point district, was presented to the county court this morning asking that a light layer of oil be applied to the main road of that place to lay the dust during the summer months. Heavy auto travel over the road during the summer makes the dust a terrific nuisance to the housewives of that section. The petition was presented by Royal Brown of Eagle Point.

Inasmuch as the oiling fund was cut to the bone by the budget committee last winter, there is no money on hand for the war on dust, so the Eagle Point plea was taken under advisement with the promise relief would be granted if possible.

It is reported that several districts lying alongside main traveled dirt roads will file similar petitions.

The county court yesterday visited the Dead Indian and Wagner Creek roads, inspecting proposed road improvements. Both matters were taken under advisement.

This morning session of the county court was devoted chiefly to signing the mid-month batch of bills.

OREGON DRY LAW MUST REMAIN IS WORD OF POLING

PORTLAND, Ore., April 13.—(AP)—"This is an emergency, not a prohibition fight," said Dr. Daniel A. Poling, chairman of the allied forces for prohibition, in addressing a mass meeting of prohibition workers here last night, after declaring that repeal of the Oregon dry law would be a severe blow to the dry cause.

"Let them win here, let the principle of withdrawal of support of the constitution, once pledged, be established," he stated, "and there is no prophet competent to tell where the work will end."

He said repeal of the Oregon law would be of greater consequence than repeal in New York because Oregon has been recognized as a dry state while New York never was dry."

"Every communist," he said, "would thank God" for repeal of the Oregon dry law, inasmuch as "repeal would lend aid and comfort to alien and unfriendly forces."
