Douglas Fairbanks Jr. In Holly Film

Surpassing even the characterization of the young nobody from nowhere in "Union Depot," Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., brought to the screen of the Holly theater yesterday a just-revealed gift for satiric interpretation which adds another factor to the many he has already displayed.

Fairbanks, Jr., as the young hero whose private life suddenly becomes a matter of public property, performs excellently. He makes one visualize the annoyances and vexations which must assail the men whose aerial achievements force them to the headlines, in spite of modesty and unassuming natures. He is ably assisted by Mary Brian and Walter Catlett.

Delightful comedy situations and thrilling action scenes bake "It's Tough to Be Famous" entertainment that will be thoroughly enjoyed by everyone. The excellent short subject program on the bill consists of a Graham McNamee news reel, a Kartoon, a Babe Ruth baseball reel entitled "Just Pals,' 'and another clever bedtime story (for adults) featuring Eddie Buzzell.

A Sure Cure for Depression.

To the Editor:

To love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, soul and mind, and they neighbor as thyself.

What does God require of thee, oh man, but to shew mercy, do justly and walk humbly before thy God; and the conclusion of the whole matter, fear God and keep His commandments, for this is the whole duty of man.

Our country was taken in the name of God: our Constitution was based on the Bible; our heritage from our forefathers, Christianity. Every American by birth should be a Christian and every naturalized one should know his God, his Bible, but the census taken in 1930 shows 65 per cent didn't believe in God. No wonder God has sent this depression to humble us, to make us realize we are sinners in His sight. The remedy: Repent, believe in Christ and thou shalt be saved; and if we don't do this the worst is yet to come, judgment.

OPERA STAR HERE FOR CONCERT HAS VARIED INTERESTS

"I have a grand time. Too grand for my own good; I'm crazy about animals, especially cats. I don't play golf. I do play tennis. My favorite song—from the opera Carmen. I'm going to sing it tonight"—Coe Glade, young genius of the Chicago opera, flashed replies to the list of questions (she has all the answers on the tip of her tongue and in her dark-brown eyes) and dashed into the waiting auto which whisked her away from the Southern Pacific depot today noon to a luncheon engagement with Mr. and Mrs. Rupert J. Henry.

Her piano-accompanist, Willard Rhodes, who arrived on the Shasta with her to appear in concert here tonight, drove off in another direction with Wm. F. Isaacs to complete arrangements at the high school auditorium for the concert of the young diva, who admits she is "quite human" in spite of her voice.

Attired in a smart tailleur of brown with golden anklet and large fur scarf contradicting the masculine tendencies of her shirt waist and mannish tie, Miss Glade descended from the train to join a mass of baggage which preceded her, carrying proof of her reputation as a modern, "very" American young woman.

She greeted the anticipatory crowd, which gathered many minutes before the train arrived, with a display of white teeth and a series of exclamations, which assured all that she is "in love with the west" and doesn't "want to leave it."

Asked to verify the press reports that she has never been in lover, her only answer was: "We'll pass that by—No, I'm not interested in politics," and with that remark the artist "destined to have the whole musical world at her feet" did enter the auto and speed away.

Her concert will open at 8:15 tonight.

Coming Friday

(By Jack Retlaw.)

A tremendous treat is in store for Fox Craterian theatergoers tomorrow and Saturday, when two unusual and outstanding attractions—one on the scree nand one on the stage—are offered.

The screen feature will be that thrilling air-adventure story "The Broken Wing," featuring cyclonic Lupe Valez, Leo Carrillo and Melvyn Douglas.

"The Broken Wing" is the story of a daring young aviator who flies to a Central American country — falls head over heels in love with a cute little Latin girl—arouses the ire of a bloodthirsty bandit, who captures him and threatens to wipe him out with a firing squad—then, during the course of a dozen more adventures, cracks up with his plane in one of the mos spectacular air scenes ever witnessed here.

"The Broken Wing" will thrill the audiences as but few pictures have done heretofore. It is loaded with mile-a-minute action!

The stage feature is none other than Ray and Andy, radio crooners, who are making a personal appearance here in an excellently clever collegiate song act. These boys, who have been heard by most local radio enthusiasts many times in the past, are the Bing Crosby type of crooners, and their unusual novelty is well worth viewing.

Tonight will be the final performances of "The Misleading Lady," with Claudette Colbert, Edmund Lowe and Stuart Erwin — also that beautiful stage presentation, "The Indian Love Call," featuring Jerry Thompson.

BANDITS INVADE HOME TO BIND, ROB COUPLE

ASTORIA, Ore., April 21.—(AP)—Two masked men who indicated they were desperate, broke into the home of Mrs. Katherine Jones near Clatskanie last night, bound her and Charles Freeman, her brother, and escaped in the Jones automobile after robbing the house. State police were attempting to trace the car today. They had a good description of the men.

SPRAY FOR MOTH CONTROL ADVISED IN APPLE TREES

Apple growers are advised that the time to apply their calyx spray for the control of codling moth is fast approaching. According to L. P. Wilcox, county agent, and L. G. Gentner of the Southern Oregon Experiment station, this spray should be applied when approximately 85 per cent of the flower petals have fallen.

Apples are now in full bloom and the time for the spray application will be within the next week or 10 days. The calyx cup of the young apple will close within a week's time following the petal fall, and the purpose of this spray is to fill the cups with poison at a time when they are open.

In pear orchards where leaf and fruit-eating insects, such as sawfly larva, green fruit worm and canker worm, are present, it is advisable to apply a poison spray when the young fruits are well formed and about the size of a pea.

Use for the above sprays a powdered arsenate of lead, three pounds to the 100 gallons of water. Application is to be thorough, covering all leaves and young fruits, and in case of apples, to be especially careful in filling all calyx cups.

BOY SCOUT CAMP FEE REDUCED TO $5 FOR WEEK'S LAKE SOJOURN

At a meeting of the area executive board Sunday, the scout camp fee was reduced $1, making it $5 per week, the registration fee also being waived. It was felt by the board that the cost of food had been reduced some, and too, it would be harder for scouts to earn money for camp. This low fee should permit any scouts desiring to attend summer camp to do so.

The camp will open Tuesday, July 5. Two two-week periods have been scheduled for this year. The camp staff will assemble July 1, in order that camp will be in readiness to open with the regular program on the first day scheduled.

The official camp name was decided upon by the executive board. From this time on the Boy Scout camp at Lake of the Woods will be known as Camp McLaughlin. This name was chosen from a number of names submitted by scouts last summer. The name Camp McLaughlin was suggested by Byron Backes of troop 35 in Jacksonville, and entitled him to a free week at the 1931 summer camp.

FORT WAYNE Ind., April 21—(AP)—Lieut. George W. Hill, mail pilot for the trans-American Air Lines corporation, was killed when his airplane crashed at the municipal airport here today. Hill lived in South Bend, Ind.

Many People Shop At Harwood Photo Studio's Final Sale

The closing-out sale of Harwood's photo studio, 220 East Sixth street, which started Monday, is attracting a large number of people, it was reported today. A complete variety of photographic supplies, which the Harwood studios have carried during their location in Medford, are rapidly becoming depleted.

Harwood's studio also has a group of Indian dolls for souvenirs, which are being closed out in the sale this week. A collection of framed photographs of southern Oregon and northern California scenes have been reduced in prices, as well as photo frames and stands.

Mr. Harwood has announced that all cameras have been reduced to half price, and the numerous redwood novelties have also been lowered in price.

Do You Know That for the price of a Single Razor Blade
Without thought you slip a new blade into your razor when the old one has dulled. The cost is negligible when compared to the comfort it adds to your shave. But do you know that an equal amount spent for electricity will still be lightin_ your shave for many days after that new blade has been discarded for another. And so it is with all other electric services. Whether it's cold to cool your refrigerator, heat to cook your dinner or power to do the cleaning, one is just as efficient, just as economical, as the other.
