Rehearsals Show Hilarious Humor In Coming Farce

The splendid rehearsals of the past week for the clever and very humorous farce comedy, "Bless His Little Heart," promise splendid performances next Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, April 26 and 27, when given at St. Mark's guild hall.

The play moves rapidly along without a dull moment and the various characters are all capable and well adapted to their parts.

Ellow Mae Wilson has the role of a successful interior decorator, as well as a charming young wife and mother.

Lois Pearson, cast as an "actress," is a most attractive and intriguing personality.

Edith Stevens, as "Mrs. Stebbins," the philanthropic aunt of "Billy" and as the widowed "Maria," gives a realistic and professional interpretation of the role in all her actions.

Fletcher Paul, spontaneously amusing in the role of a retired sea captain, in love with "Maria," proves again his versatility in character portrayal.

Harold GeBauer and Frank Van Dyke become entangled in a merry mixup, but cleverly handle all situations to bring about a happy finale.
