

FRENCH PRESIDENT SHOT BY ASSASSIN NEAR DEATH DOOR

Assassin's pistol was fired twice. He raised it and fired twice. Farrere stopped with a bullet in the arm but lunged forward again and grappled with the man.

Paul Gulohard, director of the Paris police, ran forward. The assassin fired again. The bullet struck Gulohard in the arm.

A dozen police surrounded the man and a crowd gathered. As the crowd grew it became an infuriated mob. The police had the greatest difficulty in protecting their prisoner.

At last they got him away. At police headquarters they identified him as Paul Gougouloff, a Russian physician.

They had no idea of his motive, but someone heard him shout as he fled: "Die for the fatherland."

The police, hammering at Gougouloff, learned that he had come here from Monaco Wednesday night, especially to commit this crime.

He was born at Cosack, he told them, and two years ago formed what he called the Society of Russian Fascists.

Shot for Revenge He shot President Doumer, he confessed, because he wanted revenge for the French refusal to intervene in Russia against the bolsheviks.

Meanwhile, back in the exhibition room, Farrere and others bent over the president.

He was already nearly unconscious, but he mumbled a few incoherent words as they lifted him, placed him on a stretcher and carried him to the Bejoux hospital.

The doctors there performed an operation and there was a blood transfusion.

One of those who were first to reach the president's side said he had heard M. Doumer whisper: "Pas possible."

In English it would be: "This seems impossible."

Boat Noted in Hook From police headquarters came word that when they searched the assassin they found in his pocket a notebook with the phrase printed in pencil in letters an inch high:

"This day I killed the president of the French republic."

Premier Andre Tardieu was the first man to reach the hospital after the news had gone about. Former Premier Caillaux came soon and there was a stream of distinguished personages.

Madame Doumer, who gave four sons to France in the war, was grief-stricken when she reached the bedside.

As the evening wore on and a crowd pressed about the hospital bits of news trickled out.

Rally After Operation The doctors disclosed that after the emergency operation the patient had rallied slightly.

"Os va," he murmured, the doctors said. "That means 'I am all right.'"

United States Ambassador Edge and Norman H. Armour, secretary to the embassy, were among the first to visit the hospital.

At 5:30 o'clock Mr. Edge sent another embassy secretary to get the latest report on the president's condition. The secretary was told a second transfusion had just been performed.

Then Mr. Edge sent a radiogram to Secretary of State Stimson, who is on the way back to Washington aboard the steamer Vulcania.

Paul Doumer, distinguished white-bearded statesman who has served his country for many years in the field of politics, became president of the republic last May.

His closest competitor was the late Aristide Briand, but the "man of peace" had alienated enough of his contemporaries by his policy of rapprochement to prevent his election.

So M. Doumer, at 74, became the 13th president of France. It was the second time he had been a candidate. In 1906 he ran against Armand Fallieres, president of the senate, and lost.

Of Humble Origin. He is a man of humble beginnings. His father was a section boss on a railroad. He died when the president was a boy and it was a struggle to attain an education, for he had to leave grammar school, at 14 to help support his widowed mother.

He laid the foundations for his political career in newspaper work. When he gravitated to politics he specialized in finance and became minister of finance in 1920.

Subsequently, for seven strenuous years, he was governor-general of Indo-China and on his return from that far away post was re-elected to the chamber of deputies. Three years later he became president of the lower house. He held that office when Fallieres, then president of the senate, defeated him for the presidency of the republic.

Sons Lost in War. M. Doumer's heaviest sorrow came in the war. Three of his five sons were killed in battle and a fourth died of his wounds soon after the armistice.

During the war M. Doumer was a busy man in several minor government posts, although in 1917, he was minister without portfolio in the Painleve cabinet which was overthrown by Clemenceau.

In 1921 Aristide Briand, then premier, made him minister of finance. Six years later he became president of the senate.

MEXICAN DIVORCE PUTS OREGONIAN IN LAW'S SHADOW

HOOD RIVER, Ore., May 6.—(Sp.)—Asserting that a Mexican divorce is not valid in Oregon, District Attorney John Baker Thursday filed a warrant against Dr. W. E. Nichol, prominent Hood River physician, accusing him of polygamy. Dr. Nichol was arrested and required to post $1,000 bond.

On March 9, the physician filed a divorce petition in Juarez, Mexico, and on April 29 the divorce from his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth G. Nichol, was granted. On the same day he married Mrs. Anna Mae Kingsley of Portland, at Vancouver, Wash.

District Attorney Baker held that under the Oregon law Dr. Nichol may be prosecuted for polygamy, contending that Mexican divorces are not valid here, although their validity has never been adjudicated in the courts of this state.

A divorce proceeding begun by the doctor in the Hood River county circuit court and to which his wife filed an answer, is still pending. Dr. Nichol's attorney, however, has filed a motion for dismissal of the complaint because of the Mexican divorce. This motion has not yet been heard.
