NAME WRITTEN IN ON BALLOT MUST ALSO BEAR AN 'X'

County Clerk Deillah Stevens Meyer yesterday mailed registered letters to all election boards, giving final instructions on the counting of "written in names" in addition to the instructions, the "written in name" to be counted MUST be marked with an X, to be a legal vote.

The county clerk's letter is as follows: "There still seems to be some misunderstanding about counting written in names on the ballots. In order that there be no mistake in the count I want to explain this fully."

"Any name written in on a Republican ballot, regardless of the political faith of the person, must be counted on the Republican tally sheet. Every name written in on a Democratic ballot and voted for must be counted on the Democratic tally sheet.

"In order to secure the nomination by having one's name written in, the person must receive the majority of the votes of the party on whose ballot his name is written in.

"Please take this letter to the polls with you on election day so you may refer to it if necessary."

The letter comes as a reply to reports circulated, chiefly in the county districts, that a name written for a Democrat on a Republican ticket, or vice versa, counted in the total of the candidate's votes.

It is also explained that voters who written their parties do not receive both Democratic and Republican ballots to vote as they please, but will be given only the ballot of the party under which they registered.

Handbills containing sensational last minute charges made their appearance in the rural districts today. They were reported in the form of affidavits. In accordance with long established custom, it is likely that Thursday evening, a deluge of 11th hour canards will descend upon the voters.
