FLOWER LOVERS

URGED TO ENTER

1932 EXHIBITION

Judges for Medford's annual garden show, to be held at the high school gymnasium on South Oakdale Thursday and Friday of this week, to which all flower lovers of the Rogue River valley are urged to bring their blossoms for display, were announced this morning by Mrs. A. E. Reames, president of the Medford Garden club.

They are: Mrs. Frank L. Chambers and Mrs. O. R. Gullion, Eugene; C. E. Moyer, Roseburg; Chas. Voorhies, Medford; Mrs. J. H. Monroe and Miss Palmer, Ashland.

All experienced in flower culture and arrangement and have presided at many previous exhibitions, assuring the Medford show professional judging.

As the dates for the show draw nearer the Garden club members continue their clamoring for increased entries and repeat requests for flowers from all growers. The show will not be restricted to members of the Garden club and neither will the prizes. Anyone with lovely flowers is asked to enter them and may be assured the same recognition given the more experienced fanciers.

All committee members are asked to be at the high school gymnasium at 8:30 o'clock Thursday morning to assist in the arrangement of the list. Due to lack of space the classification list, printed in the Mail Tribune Thursday, May 19, will not be reprinted but copies of the newspaper can be obtained at the office. And all prospective exhibitors who are in doubt regarding departments in which to display flowers are asked to review the classification list.

H. D. McCahey, owner of one of southern Oregon's best known rose gardens, and an authority on varietals, will be at the high school gymnasium from 9:00 o'clock until 11:30 Thursday morning to assist exhibitors in identifying their roses for classification.

The exhibits will be closed to entries at 11 o'clock Thursday morning. Persons bringing flowers or other displays to the show are asked to use the south entrance. The south door will be open, providing a direct entrance to the gymnasium, where space is available for an abundance of flowers and artistic arrangement of all entries.

H. B. Howell, whose fields of bulbous iris have enticed thousands of visitors to Grants Pass, is expected to exhibit 50 varieties in the Medford show.

Much interest is centered in the special features and novelties to be included in this year's exhibition. They include the occasional table, the economy table and the display of "covered wagon roses."

In the latter exhibit will be included all the old fashioned roses, dear to the hearts of the women, who first gardened the pioneer soil, in an effort to start growing here the flowers grown "back home."

The committees hope to make this exhibit one of the largest in the show and are especially anxious to have the cooperation of all persons throughout the countryside, who have preserved in their gardens the growth of old fashioned roses.

Forestry and wild flower exhibits will also be included as usual in this year's show, and many previously unknown flowers and shrubs are expected to make their debut to Medford admirers in these departments.

The flower show in accordance with the established custom, will be open to the public with no admission charges.

New Jumper Dress 3 Frocks in One; Smart in Town, Country or at Beach

By DIANA MERWIN Associated Press Fashion Editor

PARIS.—(AP)—The jumper dress—a three-in-one frock ready for town, country and beach wear—has stormed fashion's fortress.

It consists of a wool skirt, suspender straps and a brief blouse put together in a manner reminiscent of a small girl's playtime frock.

Designed with a high front to match the skirt and worn without any blouse at all it becomes a beach lounging suit with a back as bare as its modern bathing suit.

These jumper frocks generally are made of wool, cut with a skirt loose enough for active sports topped with a pair of straps which suggest a workman's overalls.

The blouses are cut on a dozen different designs of a score of different materials. Some of them have huge peasant puffed sleeves, others long straight sleeves, and still others short cap sleeves.

Crepes printed with daisies, dots a checked geometric designs; striped, checked and printed linens; cross-barred dimities, dotted swiss, and knitted and woven wools are the varied fabrics used for the different blouse designs.

SPORT SLANTS

ALAN GOULD ASSOCIATED PRESS SPORTS EDITOR

The story was told with considerable detail last season, but the method by which Bill Killefer aroused the Browns to a real fighting pitch against the Athletics, with the result that the champions were whipped four straight, still stands as an example of what may be done on the ball fields with old-fashioned methods.

The background was laid in an early season series when the A's became insultingly overbearing in the process of taking the Browns over the hurdles. As Killefer tells it:

"Big George Earnshaw in one game, walked around the infield loudly asking any of the A's if they wanted to pitch. As a crowning insult, Connie Mack sent Eddie Rommel, the old pitcher, in to play second base.

"I was fit to be tied, I was so mad. When we got back to St. Louis for a home stand, with the A's coming to town, I told all my players I would fine any one of them I caught even talking with the Mackmen. I gave 'em an old-fashioned fight talk, with the result we went out all fired up.

"The A's were not prepared for such tactics, in the first place. They won the first game, with Grove in the box, but they were back on their heels and the Browns took the next four in a row, at a time when the Athletics were being hard pressed by Washington.

"After we had beaten them to a standstill, Earnshaw had the courage to come over and congratulate me and tell me he wished there was more of that kind of spirit in baseball."

Blasted Grove. The Browns handed another wallop to the A's later in the season when they stopped Lefty Grove's record winning streak, after 16 straight, with Dick Coffman in the box.

Coffman, a short time before had blanked the White Sox with one hit, a single by Kerr in the middle of the game. When the A's came to town and it was Grove's turn to pitch, Coffman personally asked for the assignment against the famous southpaw.
