What the Girl Scouts Are Doing

By Mrs. W. J. Wilson.
If you hear a group of girls chattering about Blushing Bunny, Hopping John or the Hawaiian Islands, when they are planning an out-of-doors meal, do not be unduly alarmed. They are perfectly sane and are very probably a troop of Girl Scouts discussing some of the new recipes which are recommended by national Girl Scout headquarters in the new spring pamphlets on day hikes and day camping.

If the cooks for the day have planned for Hopping John for lunch, they will use two cups of cow peas, three cups of water in which the peas were cooked, one cup of uncooked rice and three tablespoons of bacon drippings, add salt to taste. They will boil the peas until they are tender, add the rice and bacon drippings, and the required amount of water to steam the rice. When this is cooked over a slow fire for one hour, there will be food aplenty for six hungry hikers.

To the initiated, Blushing Bunny means one tablespoonful of butter, the same amount of flour, one can of tomato soup, one-half cup of diced American cheese and either crackers or bread. Give a Girl Scout cook these ingredients and she will melt the butter, blend it with the flour and add the soup. When this mixture is thoroughly heated she will add the cheese. The result is poured over either crackers or bread—and presto—the Blushing Bunny is ready for his brief moment in the sun.

The Hawaiian Islands are of gastronomic, rather than geographical interest to the hungry Girl Scout. The recipe for this tasty tid-bit calls for large slices of bread, buttered and browned on each side in a frying pan. They are served very hot, with a slice of pineapple covered with a little juice, on each slice of bread, and topped with a bit of red jelly or a marachino cherry.

Roadside crabbage, which may be played as well by two persons as by thirty-two, is guaranteed to make the miles roll by on any hike. The group of hikers decide what certain things are to be looked for, naming various birds, flowers, trees, rabbits, birds or animal tracks. Each player writes 21 pebbles, seeds or nuts, to be used as counters. Whenever one of them sees one of the objects named she calls "pegs" and throws away a counter. The girl who first "pegs" all of her counters wins the game.

D. A. R. News

HIGHWAY CORNER IS MADE PRESENTABLE

In line with the movement to improve and beautify the Pacific highway before the 1932 tourist season, several public spirited firms have co-operated in improving the appearance of the Sparta building at the corner of Main and Riverside.

Through cleaning up and decorating of the windows and the installation of modern lighting fixtures on the vacant main floor, an attractive appearance by night, as well as day, has been insured. Window displays will be changed frequently and an effort made to keep this important corner looking presentable throughout the tourist season, or until the space is again rented. Those responsible for the improvement are J. C. Thompson, division manager of the California Oregon Power company; C. J. Toy, southern Oregon representative for Del Monte food products and Robert Boyl, representative for Carnation milk.

EX-MONTANANS PLAN PICNIC FOR JUNE 19

The annual picnic of the Montana association will be held June 19 in Ever Shady park, officers of the association announced following a meeting at the chamber of commerce. One of the outstanding features of this year's program will be Lem Wilson's story of the capture of George Garrett, better known to former Montana residents as "Big-Nosed George." Mr. Wilson, now a resident of this city, scouted in Montana in '79, and was one of the men who captured the famous cattle rustler.

40 ET 8 PLANS CAVES JAMBOREE SATURDAY

Medford voters of the "40 et 8" society is making plans for a big ceremonial at the Oregon Caves next Saturday night, June 4. Voyagers from all parts of southern Oregon will assemble at the popular caves next for a banquet and ceremonial in the evening and many plans to spend the week-end at the resort. It is reported that Earle S. Dutton, grande chef de gare, George Burton, grande correspondent and other state officials will arrive from Portland by plane Saturday to participate in the evening's program.

A Delicious Tuna Cocktail

12 stalks green asparagus
2 tomatoes or an Alligator Pear
1 cup Thousand Island Dressing
Break Tuna slightly with a fork.

Mix it with the dressing. Line sides of cocktail glasses with stalks of asparagus and sections of tomatoes of Alligator Pear. Place Tuna in center of glasses.

Medford Group Reports Fine B. P. W. Convention

The following report of the Business and Professional Women's convention at Klamath Falls was brought to Medford last week by the local delegation:

More than one hundred members from the 22 clubs over the state were present at Klamath Falls last week end for the state convention of Oregon Federation of Business & Professional Women's clubs. The Klamath Falls club has 103 members and there were therefore in attendance at most of the sessions nearly 200 members.

Miss Emily R. Kneubuhl, who is national executive secretary from New York City, was the guest speaker and attended the sessions, lending her national experience and vision to the problems brought up for discussion.

Miss Kneubuhl also addressed the group on "Our International Relations," upon which subject she is well able to speak, having been abroad with the "Good Will Tours" during the past three years when she conducted business and professional women of ten foreign countries. She brought out particularly the efforts of women all over the world, toward the putting down of war.

Miss Kneubuhl also addressed the group at the National Banquet on Saturday evening, her subject being "A New Frontier." She gave the thought that where formerly a pioneer was expected to "Go West"; today our frontier lies in the field of aviation, science and cause and cure of war.

During the roundtable session discussion was had as to ways and means of securing registration of every person in the United States, and a committee was appointed to report at the district conferences as to the feasibility of such an undertaking. Coincident therewith is an editorial in the May 28th issue of the Saturday Evening Post on the same subject matter.

The matter of co-operation with and from our brother service clubs was spoken of and much pleasure was expressed both by members from these brother clubs and from the B.P.W. clubs as to the results obtained by such cooperation in various communities.

Roundtable discussions were helpful, instructive and entertaining with leaders at each well chosen and capable of handling their particular subjects.

The reading of the Club Collect by Mrs. Olive B. Cornett, was most impressive both at the national banquet on Saturday evening and at the Sunday morning inaugural breakfast.

T. R. Gillenwaters, district attorney; Frank Jenkins, president of the Southern Oregon Publishing company, and Ven. J. Henry Thomas were among the men who brought to the group welcome and some helpful and elevating thoughts.

The joy meetings were the jam-boree and the courtesy luncheon at Crater Lake community house.

The Western District Conference, comprised of eight western states will meet in Berkeley, Cal., on June 20, 1932. The state convention for 1933 will be held at Coquille, Ore.

Kindred attractions will be presented in realistic and colorful oil paintings which are bound to cause much favorable attention and comment.

The first panels of a series of 30 have already been completed by the Cleveland Studios of this city and will probably be on display to the local public before their installation on the Pacific highway.

First Bank Opened Here In 1899 Still Operating

(Ed Note: Medford history compiled by members of Crater Lake chapter, D. A. R., continued from last Sunday.)

Chapter 11
The Medford National bank, now the Medford National, was opened for business June 20, 1899 in a new building on the corner of North Bartlett and Main streets where the Hoostery is now.

J. H. Stewart was president, E. E. Ankeny vice president and J. E. Knapart, cashier. Arthur Weeks of San Francisco designed the building and wood work was furnished by the Weeks Bros. planing mill. The old vault still remains intact at the rear end of the Hoostery. Dr. Keene and Dr. R. T. Burnett, now of Eugene, occupied the front offices upstairs in this new building. In 1909 the bank moved to its present building at Central and Main streets. In March, 1906, it became the Medford National Bank under the same officers. Now W. H. Gore is president.

J. A. Perry, vice president and John Orsh is cashier. In April 14, 1905 the First National Bank was organized with $25,000 capital and W. S. Crowell, president, F. K. Deuel vice president and M. L. Alford, cashier. Directors, F. K. Deuel, W. S. Crowell, Charles Strang, E. V. Carter and George Dunn. The Howard building which stood where the First National is still located was bought for $7500 and in 1909 the present building replaced the old one. Now E. B. Harder is president, C. English vice president and O. Crawford cashier.

The Farmers and Fruitgrowers Bank was organized in 1909 in its present location. President, Delroy Getchell, R. F. Antle, cashier. Leo Jacobs, assistant cashier. Delroy Getchell still is president. C. E. Gates, vice president and F. E. Wahl cashier.

To the Southern Pacific, Medford owes its beginning and much of its development. Few people realize the vicissitudes which attend the building of this railroad and its early history is very interesting. In the day, the man who started the first stage line from St. Joe Mo. across the plains and who originated the pony express, championed the construction of the Oregon and California railroad from Portland south to the California line. About the same time the California and Oregon railroad commenced building northward through the southern state. One road stopped at Roseburg and the other at Redding and for a number of years the old Concord coach drawn by six horses connected the two terminals of these roads. In 1881 work was commenced again on the Oregon and California road and by the Spring of 1884 had reached Phoenix. Henry Villard who had built the Northern Pacific road and was backing the Oregon and California, lost his fortune in Wall Street and another period of inaction followed.

Finally the Southern Pacific acquired title to the Oregon road under a ninety-nine year lease and began the extension of the California end of the road, completing it Dec. 17, 1887, and the dream of Ben Holladay became a reality; from Maine to Florida and from Florida to Portland on the Columbia river stretched the bands of steel. Then it was that Dan Crowley drove the last coach of the overland stage line across the Sierras.

In 1891 the Honeyman and De Hart Company of Portland built a railroad between Medford and Jacksonville. January 1893 this road was sold to C. H. Leadbetter and son, of Portland, who Jan. 20, leased it to W. S. Barnum. It was known then as the Jacksonville Shortline and for several years Barnum was himself the engineer and was assisted in running the one mixed train by his sons William who was then fifteen, and John who was two years younger. The train stopped at a point just outside of Medford for fuel both going and coming, and also often found it necessary to stop while the youthful conductor drove cattle off the tracks.

Two years later Barnum's lease expired and was not renewed because latter part of the sixties Ben Holladay wished to engage in other business. The Medford-Jacksonville road continued to operate under different managers until March 16, 1900, W. S. Barnum bought this Rogue River Valley R. R. for $12,000 and for a number of years it had the distinction of being the only railroad in the United States whose owner, crew and officers were all members of the same family.

It has always been expected that Medford's third railroad would connect with this Jacksonville road and as far back as 1893 we find that Leadbetter planned to extend the road he had shortly before acquired. But it was not until 1904 that a railroad survey was made in the present Butte Falls district and J. D. Orwell, W. F. Entrop and Emanuel King Incorporated as "The Butte Falls Sugar Pine Co." bought two thousand acres of timber.

December 15 of the same year "The Medford and Crater Lake Railroad Co." was formed by seven prominent men and officers elected as follows: A. A. Davis, president, B. F. Adkins, vice president, Dr. J. M. Keene, secretary, W. I. Vawter, treasurer, R. H. Whitehead, manager. The other two members of the company were B. H. Harris and W. F. Entrop.

Inside of four months Medford citizens had subscribed $25,000 and contracts were let for building a railroad from Medford to Butte Falls through Eagle Point. The Fee Brothers of Pennsylvania became interested and the work progressed so that June 27, 1907 the first train left Medford over the new road and Eagle Point declared it a holiday.

The name had been changed to "The Pacific and Eastern" and everyone believed that it would be but a question of a few years before as the new name implied, the Pacific and East would be connected by another transcontinental, for it was known that the Great Northern was interested. Then came a Wall Street crash and by the latter part of 1907 the P. & E. was in the hands of a receiver. It was bought and sold several times until 1924 when Mr. Olds sold all but the extreme southern end to the Owen Oregon Lumber Co. and it became a logging road connecting the mill in Medford with the company's vast holdings beyond Butte Falls, though it is still a standard gauge road.

Siskiyou Memorial Park "The Park of Perpetual Care"

"SHOW me the manner in which a nation or community cares for its dead, and I will measure with mathematical exactness the tender sympathies of its people, their respect for the laws of the land and their loyalty to high ideals."—Gladstone.

"A cemetery, yet a lovely garden spot
Where naught of woe obtrudes its melancholy,
But tender lawn and peaceful, sun-flecked grot Afford a balm that soothes and pleshes wholly."

HERE sorrow will find peace and contentment in the vibrant beauty of broad lawns, radiant beds of flowers, beautiful towering trees and shrubbery, appropriate architecture, that speak of life everlasting. Gone is the proverbial graveyard that people shun. Gone are the tottering tombstones, sunken graves and gnarled, ancient trees, grown round about with weeds, a spectacle that, in the language of Bruce Barton, "adds a final horror to the grief of parting."

It is not simply the selection of a resting place. Its arrangement and completion includes so many and important considerations that it should be accorded a justly important place in the plans of ordered life. Yet, once fulfilled, it becomes a source of life-long peace.

To the furtherance of a plan so human and so far-reaching in its benefits,
Siskiyou Memorial Park Is Dedicated

DANCES AND CAKE MADE INROADS ON CANDIDATE FUNDS

C. J. Haas, an unsuccessful candidate for sheriff in the Republican primaries, expended $123.25 and Geo. A. Carter, successful candidate for county clerk, spent $122. These are the two highest amounts listed to date in expenses of candidates filed with the county clerk, H. D. Reed of Gold Hill, unopposed Democrat for the justice of the peace, spent the minimum sum—$5 as a filing fee.

Assessor J. B. Coleman, who won a fifth term nomination and the endorsement of both parties in the primary, spent $4.30 for pie and cake during the campaign, according to his account of expenses filed. He spent $21.50 at five cents per mile running around to candidates' halls and paid $3 to enter the Twin Plunge at Ashland and $2.50 for dancing. The total expenditure was $30.30.

A. C. Walker, treasurer, who like Assessor Coleman won the double nomination only spent $8.15, most of which was for dancing and eating.

Earl H. Fehl avers he spent $81 in the race for county judge and sets forth that he took up a collection for hall rent and had advertising donated.

William T. Berry spent $23.87 on a dry platform, to lose in the Republican race for sheriff and Vic H. Beckman, Democratic aspirant for county clerk, spent $27.50.

The heaviest items were for advertising and pictures.
