Oregon Primary Races Marked by Close Votes

William Dellrel (left) and Harvey Starkweather, Democrats, ran neck and neck for the nomination as representative from the first Oregon district. According to latest figures Starkweather appears to have won the nomination, although the lead fluctuated for several days after the first count of votes in the May 20 primary.

Canvas of the votes may be necessary to finally determine the victor in the race between James W. Mott (right) and Willis C. Hawley, veteran legislator, for the Republican nomination from the first Oregon district. Last tabulations show Mott leading by 138 votes.
