

SELECT DEAN TO UNIFY FRESHMAN COLLEGE COURSE

of interest and knowledge and to permit him to defer decision as to his future career until he can choose understandingly. The lower division organization provides a touring agency in the new system. Within it the student may range among the departments of basic knowledge now divided among the several schools. Requirement that students in the first two years take work in several different fields, arranged for by a system of so-called group requirements, provides that the student is not only allowed considerable freedom, but also led to lay a foundation of reasonable breadth.

"In practice the new plan will work something like this: An entering freshman who knows what line of work he wishes to pursue may still register and in fact is advised to enroll, in the school of his choice on the campus where major work in it is located and continue the course through to graduation. He is responsible, however, to the lower division for the fulfillment of certain group requirements in basic subjects.

"The student who has selected his definite work but who for some reason does not desire to enroll on the campus where major work in that field is given may still, in a considerable number of cases, register for that school but take his undergraduate work on the opposite campus. This applies particularly to the schools of business administration, fine arts, home economics, journalism, law, literature, language and art, physical education, science and social science.

"Students not yet decided on their choice of major work may go to either campus where they will be enrolled in either as lower division students indefinitely as to schools." Dr. Smith continued. "In this they will have opportunity to 'explore' the various fields of education while getting fundamental general work in the four great groups of physical, biological and social sciences, languages, literature and art."

MAJESTIC SALES MEETING CALLED

John W. O'Neil of Portland, manager of the Cronin company, and Stanley Jones, southern Oregon representative, the Majestic factory group, and all dealers from the entire southern Oregon territory are gathering at the Hotel Medford this evening at 6:30 o'clock, announcement was made today by Clayton Isaac, manager of the Palmer's Electric store.

The sales meeting is being conducted in order that the new Majestic products being introduced by the Cronin company might be shown to the dealers. The Majestic refrigerator and radio will be shown at the hotel, Mr. Isaac said today.

The crux of the meeting will be the display of the new four and five-foot sizes of Majestic dependable electric refrigerators, a new series introduced to the industry.

Heading the list of features which characterize this new product are "Elasto," a new tough, non-chipping, non-fading finish; surprising economy of operation equivalent to the current consumption of a sixty-watt light bulb; and a quietness comparable to machines at triple the price.

"Our picture of these new refrigerators," says Mr. Isaac, "is that they are, in the refrigeration field, what good sizes and eight are to the automobile man. Our larger Majestic hermetically-sealed models may be likened to the finest twelve and sixteen cylinder cars. All Majestic will give dependable, efficient refrigeration, contained in attractive cabinets, the difference being, that the deluxe line has luxury features which are desirable, but not essential, to completely satisfactory food preservation."

Two Saved in Trans-Pacific Plane Disaster

The transpacific flight ambitions of Nat Browne, veteran New York aviator ended in Puget Sound, Seattle, May 30, when Browne's big red monoplane "Lone Star" collapsed in midair during refueling operations. Browne and Frank Brooks, last minute volunteer assistant in refueling operations were saved from death by their parachutes. The gasoline hose of the refueling ship caught in the stabilizer of the "Lone Star" causing it to go into a nose dive and when Brooks attempted to right the ship it fell in pieces leaving the two men in the bottom of the rescue boat with Brooks sitting on the edge of the craft with his back to the camera. The other shows Browns lying in bed at a hospital with a dislocated shoulder.

TOMATO ESSAY ENDS SATURDAY

Tomorrow night at nine o'clock will be the dead-line for entries in the tomato essay contest sponsored by Ed Pierce, owner and manager of Pierce's hothouses northeast of Medford.

Three cash prizes, fifteen dollars, first; seven dollars and fifty cents, second; and five dollars for the third winner will be awarded by Mr. Pierce at the close of the contest.

The essays must not exceed 1000 words and should discuss the tomato industry in general, with special emphasis on the superiority of vine-ripened tomatoes over those ripened otherwise. Entrants should bring or send their articles to the tomato contest department of the Mail Tribune not later than Saturday night, June 4, at nine.

Complete details concerning the tomato essay contest have appeared in this newspaper in a number of advertisements during the past several weeks.

RAIN HANDICAPS TIMBER CUTTING

The logging crew of the Owen-Oregon Lumber Sales company operating in the Butte Falls district, has been handicapped the past week by rainy weather and wet condition of the forests. The crew is operating on a profit-sharing, co-operative plan agreed to by the workers and the company.

With the ground wet and slippery, it has been impractical to use machinery for hauling, etc. The working force, however, is busy felling trees and preparing for heavy operations when the ground dries. About 40 men, all former employees, are engaged.

James H. Owen, general manager of the lumber company returned yesterday from a short business trip to Portland. He recently underwent a minor operation.

NORTON UPHOLDS DEAL FOR RANCH

Judge Norton in the case of Townsend vs. Harris, handed down an opinion denying the relief asked for by the plaintiff. In 1926 Townsend purchased, through a Medford real estate agency, a fruit ranch from L. D. Harris, and after remaining on the property for a year, Townsend brought suit to rescind the sale on the ground of fraud and misrepresentation.

The property was sold for a consideration of $10,000. Plaintiff was represented by his attorney, Parter J. Neff and defendant by his attorney, Gus Newbury.
