

EDUCATION BOARD GIVES DETAILS IN CURRICULA PLANS

More Uniform Division and Service Courses in Home Economics Are Provided for Both Universities

SALEM, June 9.—(AP)—More uniform division and service courses in home economics on the state college and university campuses, together with complete upper division major curricula in this field at Corvallis as at present, are approved in the uniform organization of that school. Details of curricula and faculty arrangements which go into effect this fall were announced today by the Oregon state board of higher education.

Under the new arrangement, which is in general accord with the recommendation of the federal survey report on Oregon higher education, course offerings at the two institutions are decreased by more than 28 per cent while the combined budget for next year will be about 14 per cent under this year. At the same time choice of major curricula in the school at Corvallis have been increased from two to three while at Eugene the lower division and service courses offered have been given exactly the same content as corresponding courses at Corvallis.

Dean Milam is Director of the work on both campuses and will be in charge of the work at the school at Oregon State college since 1911.

The lower division and service courses in home economics at Eugene will include 12 lower division and three upper division courses, affording training in foods and nutrition, clothing and textiles including selection and construction, home planning and furnishing, child development and household management.

"At Corvallis the work is divided into the major departments of clothing, textiles and related arts; foods and nutrition; household administration, including child development and parent education, institutional economics and home economics education.

Some reductions in staff have been made possible in the school through the offering of some work in alternate years, dropping certain elective courses and arranging for larger sections.

On the administrative staff will be Dean Milam, with Veta Smyth, secretary, and Bertha Kollas, stenographer. Others at Corvallis will be Joannina C. Williams, professor of foods and nutrition; Alma C. Pritchard, professor of clothing, textiles and related arts, to be on sabbatical leave this coming year; A. Grace Johnson, professor of household administration, also to take sabbatical leave; Sara W. Prentiss, professor of child development and parent education; Melissa Hunter, professor of institutional economics; Mildred Chamberlain, associate professor of clothing, textiles and related arts; Georgia Bibbe, assistant professor in institutional economics; Lillian Taylor, and Willetta Moore, instructors in foods and nutrition; Gertrude Stickleland, Margaret E. and Dorothy M. Musty, instructors in clothing, textiles and related arts; Vera H. Brandon and Eleanor Spike, instructors in household administration; Mary E. Thomas and Margaret Eckelman, fellows in household administration.

Mabel Wood heads "O" Staff of the staff on the Eugene campus will be headed by Mabel Wood, assistant professor of foods and nutrition, transferred from Corvallis. Miss Wood will teach foods and nutrition and home management courses. Others listed on the staff at Eugene are Lillian Tingle, professor of household arts, to take sabbatical leave; Mary E. Starr, instructor in clothing and textiles; Professor Prentiss and associate professor Chamberlain, both of the Corvallis staff, will teach the "child welfare and training" and "home planning and furnishing" courses respectively one term each year.

Presley was rated by sports experts as one of the greatest football players in the history of Pacific coast football, although he played on the Washington university team some 20 years ago.

He was known as an "iron man," playing through four seasons without ever being taken out of a game. His team won every game in the four years.

LEAVENWORTH, Kas., June 9.—(AP)—A heavy hail storm in Kiekapoo township north of here covered an area four miles square with four inches of hail stones this afternoon. A heavy wind accompanied the hail. Wheat was beaten into the ground and corn, oak, tobacco and potato crops destroyed. Roofs were damaged and windows blown out. The storm continued 40 minutes.

Garden Tour Draws Crowd to Carlton Home

The Misses Carlton were hostesses at their scenic home on the Old Stage Road yesterday morning to 50 members of the Medford Garden club, who called between the hours of 10 and 12 to view the variety of blossoms, which add color and beauty to the hillside, which forms the setting for their home.

Planted in artistic pattern at intervals, broken by green lawn, vines and trees, the flower beds achieve a naturalness, which makes of them very necessary spots on the earthy canvas.

Roses, "pinks," with spicy fragrance; delphinium and a deep blue flower, which claims relationship to the one which adds glory to local woodlands in spring, best known as "bender's tongue," form a pleasing border for the lawn.

Covering a little bower, leading into the orchard, honeysuckle vines are found, filling the air with their heavy fragrance, which dominates all other perfumes of the garden.

On top of the bower a black cat reigns as weather vane and king of the garden. He is a metal reproduction of the very live cat, a cherished possession of the Misses Carlton, who also appears in the garden for his sunbath. The sketch was made by A. E. Livingston and reproduced in metal by Mr. Warner of Central Point.

The rose attracting most comment from the visitors yesterday morning is an Austrian copper, which grows beside the front entrance of the house, facing eastward. The open orange red, resembling the favored color of nasturtiums. The outside still retains the yellow of the rose's ancestors. The Carltons discovered the blossom for the first time on their arrival in Medford from the east in 1915. It had been grown by Dr. J. F. Reddy.

Turned to make their home here they started the search for the rose, which was one of the first planted at their grounds on the Old Stage road.

Following the tour of the flowers yesterday morning the guests were served a garden product, tomato juice, under the shade of the friendly which, shadows the back lawn.

County Court in Confab on Road Work Programs

Members of the Jackson county court are today conferring with the state highway commission and the county courts of Douglas and Klamath counties, in Portland on road programs for the coming year.

It is expected that a definite decision will be reached on the Butte Falls market road, and the Dead Indian market road, two uncompleted projects that link up with Klamath county and the Tiller-Trail road, a link with Douglas county. The Sams Valley secondary highway will also be considered.

Douglas county, with the aid of federal road funds, has completed most of the Tiller-Trail road to the Jackson county line. Voters of the trail district defeated a special road levy last November, whereby county and federal funds would have been assured. The defeat was attributed to the special road district taking in too much territory. The survey for the road has been made, and would extend from Trail junction with the Crater Lake highway, to the Jackson county line, a distance of about 12 miles. Its construction is adaptable to early winter work and would employ in the neighborhood of 200 men.

J. M. Devers, attorney for the state highway commission, yesterday afternoon telephoned the county court, asking for information on the unemployment situation in this county. Devers was advised that there was no change, though a few men were securing work haying in orchards and in the woods. County Commissioner Bursell advised the attorney that it was imperative that the state highway commission do something definite towards furnishing employment.

Robby, who lives next door to the Johansson's, told police he also had heard the automobile stop. W. A.
