

BLUE GRASS SEED FOR PHEASANTS IS GAME FARM PLAN

Recognizing its value as a feed for game, Gene Simpson, superintendent of the state game farm at Corvallis, has ordered winter blue grass seed to be fed the young birds.

At the game farm there are 10 varieties of quail and partridges raised. Through tests with previous hatchings, Mr. Simpson writes, he has found the birds are very fond of the blue grass seed.

Young pheasants, recently hatched at the southern Oregon branch of the state game farm, which is located west of Medford, will be ranged in the blue grass plantings.

C. C. Hoover has known the value of the blue grass as a bird seed for many years, the quail in numerous flocks having inhabited the ranch to feed upon the plantings.

YEOMEN TO MEET AND FORM CLUB

The newly organized Rhodamantus club will hold its first meeting Thursday evening at K. P. hall. Since the Yeomen have changed from a fraternal society to an old line plan of insurance, going away with the local lodges, it became necessary to organize some sort of a club, where the "old timers" could continue to enjoy the social evenings and meet old friends.

The result was the formation of this club, which is open not only to Yeomen but all who enjoy real sociability. An invitation is extended to members of the former club to be present Thursday evening and get the club started in good shape.

MUST WOMEN SUFFER?

Is it their lot to suffer cramps and backaches every month? Certainly not. The tonic effect of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has eased all that for many thousands of women. Mrs. Schnepfer's case is typical. She was always sickly, tired, gloomy. "Now," she says, "everywhere I go people tell me how much better I look. I feel like dancing for joy all the time."

The time of this privilege, however, will soon expire, the fire chief states, urging the early burning of rubbish and grass.

ECONOMIST GIVES ROTARY INSIGHT TAX REQUIREMENT

Quoting figures and statistics on "taxes, tariff and the economic outlook," Dr. John Richard Mez, of the department of economics, University of Oregon, today gave an intelligent and enlightening address on finance and economics before the Rotary club at the regular noon luncheon in the Hotel Medford.

"It costs the United States $1,500,000,000 to operate the federal, state, county and cities," Dr. Mez said, "and it will be necessary for the 100,000 tax-levying bodies in the country to tax the people to pay this money."

Dr. Mez told the club men the most difficulties being experienced by congress at the present time are balancing the budget, and meeting the demand for the bonus payment.

The military expenditures of the nation, in the army and navy, amount to nearly $700,000,000 annually, or two millions a year," he pointed out, and expressed the belief that "if taxes are to be reduced, the outcome of the disarmament conference at Geneva will be a factor."

In discussing the tariff, Dr. Mez told how the tariff walls have been rising for the past two years, until all world commerce has been stifled. With the world trade reduced from 40 to 20 billion dollars, the United States' exports have dwindled from four and a half to two billions, figures quoted by him revealed.

Indicative of the retaliations of tariffs on foreign commerce, the economist professor reminded his audience that 28 tariff walls now exist in Europe. The alarming rise in the British tariff, which will effect the United States' exports $300,000,000 in one year, were cited by Dr. Mez as one of the most important factors in the tariff question.

He urged a speedy international reversal of policies leading to free international movement of goods, capital, persons, and service. Dr. Mez advocates the abandonment of the gold standard, and inflation of currency as a means of alleviating the depression.

"Already the Seattle chamber of commerce has openly protested against further tariff increases and trade restrictions," Dr. Mez went on to say. "Many export firms, such as the International Harvester company, and farming organizations now realize that high custom duties throughout the world cannot continue without seriously harming world commerce and lowering prices."

In regard to municipal taxes, the cities must work on a planned and balanced budget he told the Rotarians. Plans such as Milwaukee, Wis., and Cincinnati, Ohio, have worked out, have aided them greatly. He told the group that the city manager plan of government would help to keep taxes down, he believed.

Turning his discussion again to foreign trade and markets, Dr. Mez said "America's economic future will depend largely on the expansion of foreign trade and markets—you cannot sell if you do not buy."

"The need of the hour is international co-operation," Dr. Mez explained, "continued and active work with the League of Nations, world court, the disarmament conference, a timely solution of reparations and war debts, and a return to sound productive effort and confidence."
