Many Enjoy Tour of Swigart Gardens

Through a little white gate, overhanging with branches of a friendly tree, 40 Medford folk wandered into flower land yesterday, just as the afternoon breezes were lifting the petals of the stately foxgloves and tossing about the Canterbury bells, which lead into the gardens of Mrs. C. A. Swigart, hostess at benefit tea for the St. Mark's auxiliary.

Down a lengthy arbor covered with grape vines, which shelter the brick walk, carpeted with woolly thyme, they continued the tour, to separate in groups to the north and the south.

First to call attention to the southern fence were the gay pink roses, drooping heavy clusters, to meet the tips of the foxgloves, which attain a height of six feet and display petals of a pinkish-orchid. From the tiny cover plants, candy tuft, pinks and Phacelia, to the Williams of Newport pink and the tallest delphinium, a color scheme of broken blue and pink prevails.

Broken only at the end of the planting where a few little yellow flowers stole into the sod to be left undisturbed by the kind-hearted gardener.

At the back fence perennial peas, sweet peas, Japanese iris and roses intermingle with dark shrubs to create a true woodland scene. Spicy pinks peek out from under a heavy growth of Scotch broom, through which another group of foxgloves send their spirals, and a red climber extends its clusters in deceitful fashion through a thornless bush, to form just another one of the "garden surprises."

Further down the line, bridging the western and northern fences, the fragrant spring snows near a large clump of ocean spray, the soft whites blending with another splash of the delphinium's several blues. In a center plot across from the lily pond, into which iris casts a delicate reflection, Pentstemon in several shades of pink grow near their little bright red crown, which decorates a taller stalk with fewer and smaller flowers.

A sun dial, a formal bench and a bird bath also add interest to the northern side of the arbor, which divides the garden. Near the bird bath grow blue forget-me-nots, filling the air with romance, and blending their fragrance with that of the baby breath. A lovely color combination is achieved nearby, where "love-in-a-mist" is grown near the Newport pink sweet williams and a large shaggy Japanese pink.

Iceland poppies add flame to the garden. The lamb's ear, a soft gray and orchid. A catalpa and almond trees, shade, and a peach a further hint of utility.

All have been urged into growth from seeds to blossoming stage by Mrs. Swigart, an almost constant inhabitant of the garden, from early spring to very late fall.

Following the tour of the garden yesterday, which is anticipated each year by garden club members and friends of Mrs. Swigart, guests were served punch and water at the garden table, where Mesdames E. H. Porter, William Andrews, R. A. Barker, T. T. Goldtrap, L. E. Williams presided, assisting the hostess.

BYLLESBY ORGAN CARRIES FEATURE ON CRATER LAKE

Some splendid publicity for Crater Lake is featured in the June issue of "Byllesby Management" magazine just off the press. The issue contains a fine article by Miss Katherine Stewart of the California Oregon Power company entitled "Jewel of the Cascades—Crater Lake," illustrated with numerous attractive views of the famous scenic wonder in various moods. The story, which occupies the lead position in the magazine, shows the result of much careful thought and research and includes a beautiful Indian legend of the forming of Crater Lake. A double-page spread of unusual photographs depicting the lake in winter garb adds much to the effectiveness of the article. This attractive picture spread was taken from an original layout by Herb Grey, advertising manager of the Medford Mail Tribune.

The front cover of the issue also is devoted to Crater Lake and presents a striking reproduction of the Phantom Ship. In this connection, the following explanation appears on the inside cover:

THIS MONTH'S COVER

A Stately Argo of Stone—the Phantom Ship—Crater Lake, Oregon. Crater Lake national park is served by the California Oregon Power company. Members of the Copco organization believe that "Byllesby Management" readers who include this scenic wonder in their vacation itinerary will ever after feel a thrill of delight in recalling the experience. The company will furnish detailed information concerning Crater Lake accommodations, highway conditions, or any other data desired, upon request.

A double-page spread of photographs taken in Crater Lake national park this past winter appears on pages 18 and 19.

It is expected that a great deal of favorable interest and comment will result from the publication of Miss Stewart's article inasmuch as the Byllesby magazine has a wide circulation throughout the east and even reaches some foreign countries. It also should result in attracting many additional visitors to Crater Lake and southern Oregon during the coming tourist season.

He sets forth that his wife is better able to secure employment than he, and that she is able-bodied, and at the age of 38 years.

Merritt asks that he be released from all further payments.

must live and will live if, with God's help, we do our full duty."

"The president's life," the Californian said, "typifies the spiritual values" and "exemplifies the undaunted courage of the real American sprung from the grass roots of the nation."

The Californian told how Lincoln's nomination was greeted with derision by half the states and added that "today the skeptic and cynic are still around and about us."

"The weapons of contemptuous assault and scurrilous innuendo are at work today throughout the land in vain effort to besmirch the character of a great American."

"He has been weighed in the balance and has not been found wanting, because modestly and fervently he has fulfilled his pledges," the Californian continued.

"He has come back to us with his shield unscathed and his head unbowed. He has taught us to strain our individual selves to the limit rather than cowardly to lie down under a paternal government, because he knows that rewards come to those who bear the burden of the heat of the day."

"With hearts full of gratitude and fidelity, we of his own state of California—the state of our love and devotion—proudly present this homespun American, a man in the best and ablest of that term, to lead us to victory in November as the next president of the United States."

"I nominate him and I give to you as your candidate our great Californian—Herbert Hoover. "We of the Republican party are proud that he has justified the trust-teehip that we so confidently committed to his hands. He has remembered the words of the Good Book that righteousness comes before peace and that not to him who is without it shall come the victory."
